

Chap. III : LA STRUCTURE INTERNE DU GLOBE ET LES MOUVEMENTS ASSOCIÉS

Activité 1 : comparer la carte des séismes et du volcanisme.

Les volcans et les séismes sont répartis dans les mêmes zones géographiques à la surface de la Terre. Ces zones relativement étroites sont dites zones actives car il y a des changements continuels dans ces zones.

Zone active du globe : surface étroite marquée par une forte activité sismique et volcanique.

Zone stable du globe : vaste surface du globe « tranquille », pas ou peu active. Elle peut être totalement océanique ou comporter à la fois une partie océanique et une partie continentale.

Les limites des zones stables ne correspondent pas toujours aux limites des continents. Le long de la côte ouest de l'Amérique du sud la limite de la zone stable correspond à la limite du continent alors que sur la côte est ce n'est pas le cas.

L'étude de la répartition des séismes et des volcans permet de localiser des frontières « actives », délimitant une douzaine de zones « stables » à la surface du globe: les plaques tectoniques.
