Mongolia Pradumna Bickram Rana, 1992 Growing disenchantment with the socialist economic model the breakdown of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance bloc and the advent of perestroika and glasnost in the former Soviet Union and Eastern Europe form the basis for Mongolia's decision to open its economy and implement a range of economic reforms. In its current effort towards structural change Mongolia's government has adopted a comprehensive series of reforms aimed at dismantling the central planning system and establishing a market based economy. The process started in 1986 and gained momentum with the 1990 election of a new government. Mongolia A Centrally Planned Economy in Transition is based mainly on the findings of the Asian Development Bank's first economic mission to Mongolia. The study begins with a comprehensive review and analysis of Mongolia's economy over several decades. It then focuses on the economic reforms undertaken since the mid 1980s to transform the economy from a centrally planned system to a market driven system. Detailed time series data on economic and social indicators are included.

The Report was edited designed laid out and printed in Mongolia. Mongolia's Economic Prospects Matthias Helble, Hal Hill, Declan Magee, 2020-06-01 This publication examines Mongolia's recent economic development and outlines reforms that would help the country take advantage of its many opportunities. Mongolia is rich in natural resources and although landlocked is well placed to boost trade with its two giant neighbors. The country needs to diversify its economy beyond mining enhance economic stability and increase employment. To maximize Mongolia's potential the government can improve macroeconomic management enhance the skill base and provide hard and soft infrastructure to promote trade and efficient logistics. Governance and institutional reforms are also crucial. The government will need to continue to drive reforms so that they are well implemented and deliver the intended change.
