Loanwords in the World's Languages Martin Haspelmath, Uri Tadmor, 2009-12-22 This book is the first work to address the question of what kinds of words get borrowed in a systematic and comparative perspective It studies lexical borrowing behavior on the basis of a world wide sample of 40 languages both major languages and minor languages and both languages with heavy

borrowing and languages with little lexical influence from other languages The book is the result of a five year project bringing together a unique group of specialists of many different languages and areas The introductory chapters provide a general up to date introduction to language contact at the word level as well as a presentation of the project s methodology All the chapters are based on samples of 1000 2000 words elicited by a uniform meaning list of 1460 meanings The combined database comprising over 70 000 words is published online at the same time as the book is published For each word information about loanword status is given in the database and the 40 case studies in the book describe the social and historical contact situations in detail The final chapter draws general conclusions about what kinds of words tend to get borrowed what kinds of word meanings are particularly resistant to borrowing and what kinds of social contact situations lead to what kinds of borrowing situations description the focus is on the standard varieties of the spoken language as used in broadcasting education and everyday casual speech The dialectology of the language and its background as a member of the Mongolic language family are also discussed Mongolian is an agglutinating language with a well developed suffixal morphology In the areal framework the language is a typical member of the trans Eurasian Ural Altaic complex with features such as vowel harmony verb final sentence structure and complex chains of non finite verbal phrases Atlas of the World's Languages R.E.

typology of questions in Northeast Asia and beyond Andreas Hölzl,2018-08-29 This study investigates the distribution of linguistic and specifically structural diversity in Northeast Asia NEA defined as the region north of the Yellow River and east of the Yenisei In particular it analyzes what is called the grammar of questions GQ i e those aspects of any given language that are specialized for asking questions or regularly combine with these The bulk of the study is a bottom up description and comparison of GQs in the languages of NEA The addition of the phrase and beyond to the title of this study serves two purposes First languages such as Turkish and Chuvash are included despite the fact that they are spoken outside of NEA since they have ties to or even originated in the region Second despite its focus on one area the typology is intended to be applicable to other languages as well Therefore it makes extensive use of data from languages outside of NEA The restriction to one category is necessary for reasons of space and clarity and the process of zooming in on one region allows a higher resolution and historical accuracy than is usually the case in linguistic typology The discussion mentions over 450 languages and dialects from NEA and beyond and gives about 900 glossed examples The aim is to achieve both a cross linguistically plausible typology and a maximal resolution of the linguistic diversity of Northeast Asia The Tangwang Language Dan Xu,2017-08-23 This book studies the Tangwang language providing the first comprehensive grammar in English of this

Chinese variety with detailed analysis of its phonology morphology and syntax This fills a gap in the literature as previously only a few articles on this language were available The book takes an interdisciplinary approach examining genetic data to determine historical patterns of population migration as well as linguistic data that focus on the influence of the Dongxiang Santa language as a consequence of language contact on the Silk Road The concluding chapter argues that Tangwang has not yet become a mixed language and that syntactic borrowing has a stronger impact than lexical borrowing on languages

Information-theoretic causal inference of lexical flow Johannes Dellert, 2019 This volume seeks to infer large phylogenetic networks from phonetically encoded lexical data and contribute in this way to the historical study of language varieties The technical step that enables progress in this case is the use of causal inference algorithms Sample sets of words from language varieties are preprocessed into automatically inferred cognate sets and then modeled as information theoretic variables based on an intuitive measure of cognate overlap Causal inference is then applied to these variables in order to determine the existence and direction of influence among the varieties The directed arcs in the resulting graph structures can be interpreted as reflecting the existence and directionality of lexical flow a unified model which subsumes inheritance and borrowing as the two main ways of transmission that shape the basic lexicon of languages A flow based separation criterion and domain specific directionality detection criteria are developed to make existing causal inference algorithms more robust against imperfect cognacy data giving rise to two new algorithms The Phylogenetic Lexical Flow Inference PLFI algorithm requires lexical features of proto languages to be reconstructed in advance but yields fully general phylogenetic networks whereas the more complex Contact Lexical Flow Inference CLFI algorithm treats proto languages as hidden common causes and only returns hypotheses of historical contact situations between attested languages The algorithms are evaluated both against a large lexical database of Northern Eurasia spanning many language families and against simulated data generated by a new model of language contact that builds on the opening and closing of directional contact channels as primary evolutionary events The algorithms are found to infer the existence of contacts very reliably whereas the inference of directionality remains difficult This currently limits the new algorithms to a role as exploratory tools for quickly detecting salient patterns in large lexical datasets but it should soon be possible for the framework to be enhanced e g by confidence values for each directionality decision
