suggest that there is little evidence of a global land grab in Southeast Asia but that over the last ten years the surge of plantations and processes of land grabbing has been a key feature in the region The collection considers how broader AET processes may be brought more clearly into focus by decentring land grabbing including consideration of its absence as well presence The diversity of cases in this collection coalesces around the productive tension in land grab studies between global capitalist processes on the one hand and context specificity and contingent motivations fuelling the expansion of large scale plantations for oil palm rubber cassava and other cash crops on the other hand The contributors further broaden the entry points to consider cross sectoral AET processes such as enclosures for mining conservation and hydropower and explore the contingencies that help to maintain smallholder production The chapters originally published as a special issue in The Journal of Peasant Studies Dominican Republic; Official Standard Names Approved by the United States Board on Geographic Names United States.
