Conradian Contracts Tamas Juhasz, 2011-04-28 This book treats Joseph Conrad's simultaneous interests in exchange contracts and the condition of displacement The central hypothesis is that the novelist's characters face the option of signing or rejecting what might with some generalization be called a social covenant These individuals conduct a lonely or marginal existence and to ease their isolation they would like to re enter a community For this reason they are ready to contribute to larger collective causes and comply with those restrictions that social life in its contractual aspect requires As Julia Kristeva puts it The foreigner is the one who works yet engagement in transactions in order to earn a social position is fraught with difficulties In return for their contribution these hard working characters do not always receive the compensation that they had in mind especially when their definition of companionship violates the boundaries of legality and social propriety Their private illicit interests are bound to clash with communal ones and the ensuing negotiating readjustment or compromise seeking either crush the individual party or result in a redefinition of the notion of contract This link between exchange and displacement is explored in nine narratives Just as the concept of exile is used in a broad often metaphorical sense ranging from characters who are actual migrants through individuals who occupy a marginal position within their native community to individuals who are caught between conflicting cultural economic models the trade or contractual alliance that can create or at least promise a sense of communal belonging and personal recognition is also manifold in its definition Although it always includes if to varying degrees the transference of economic goods or entering a specific agreement exchange is never limited to legal material procedures
