Afdeling Natuurkunde, 1957 Blood Flow Dynamics in Burns Robin Mirdell, 2019-11-25 Objectives Burns of intermediate thickness are hard to evaluate clinically This often leads to unnecessary delays of up to 14 days before a surgical decision can be made To counter this several objective methods have been developed to determine the healing potential of the wound Over the years measurement of perfusion has proven to be the most successful method for evaluation of healing potential Laser Doppler imaging LDI is currently the most used method and can determine surgical need 2 days after injury with an accuracy 90% There are however emerging techniques like laser speckle contrast imaging LSCI which also measure perfusion LSCI have several advantages over LDI and is easier to use LSCI can also investigate aspects of the microcirculation previously not possible with LDI The aim of this thesis was to investigate LSCI's ability to evaluate surgical need in burns of indeterminate partial thickness The first objective was to investigate the dynamics of perfusion the first 14 days after injury The purpose was to find the optimal time window for perfusion measurements The next goal was to determine the accuracy of different perfusion cut offs In this second study the benefit of a subsequent measurement was also investigated After this interobserver variation between different profession groups was studied Both the agreement of perfusion measurements and observer assessments were evaluated Finally cardiac vasomotion in combination with perfusion pulsatility was investigated as a method to determine surgical need
