Working in the Service Sector Gerhard Bosch,Steffen Lehndorff,2004-06-01 The rise to prominence of the service sector heralded over half a century ago as the great hope for the twenty first century has come to fruition In many cases employment in the service sector now outnumbers that in manufacturing sectors and it is accepted that in all developed countries the service sector is the only one in which employment will grow in future. The reasons for this is the subject of much controversy and debate the outcomes of which are not merely of academic interest but of decisive importance for economic policy and the quality of working and living conditions in future. In order to examine these various arguments research teams from eight European countries worked together for three years on a comparative study of the evolution of service sector employment in EU member states. They also investigated working and employment conditions in five very different service industries banking retailing hospitals IT services and care of the elderly in a number of countries and the results of their research are presented in this informative new collection of interest to students academics and researchers involved in all aspects of industrial economics.

Globalisation, Trade Liberalisation, and Higher Education in North America C.W. Barrow, S. Didou-Aupetit, J. Mallea, 2012-12-06. Since the mid 1970s economic and educational developments in Canada Mexico and the USA have been influenced by two parallel trends 1 the resurgence of global economic competition and 2 the active promotion of knowledge intensive service based economies. Both trends have been reinforced by the liberalisation of international trade under the rubric of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade GATT and the World Trade Organisation WTO. The North American Free Trade Agreement NAFTA has accelerated these trends in all three countries by providing the framework for an integrated regional economy in North America designed to compete against comparable trading blocs centred in Japan and the European Union. The purpose of this study is to examine the developing relationship between trade liberalisation post industrialisation and higher education in Canada Mexico and the USA. The larger trends and linkages that we identify are by no means confined to these three countries. We have chosen to focus on Canada Mexico and the USA because the adoption of the North American Free Trade Agreement has accelerated the development of economic policies in these countries which identify higher education as a central component of each country's new competitiveness strategy. As a consequence government policy makers and higher education decision makers are responding with targeted initiatives to promote the internationalisation of higher education generally and to promote trilateral co-operation among North American higher education institutions specifically.

Services and the Knowledge-Based Economy Mark Boden, Ian Miles, 2019-07-23. First published in 2000. Over the past two decades the service sector have increased dramatically and now occupy the largest share of the economy of advanced industrial societies. Certain business services are regularly cited as evidence for the emergence of a knowledge economy. In this pioneering book leading researchers in the fields of service industries and innovation studies investigate the reasons for the growth of the service sectors and this emergent knowledge economy. Drawing on material as diverse as macroeconomic statistics and firm level case studies the contributors demonstrate that services are often important innovators in their own right as well as contributing to innovation and economic performance in their user industries. The question of how far services are special cases and what specific processes and trajectories characterize their innovative activity is treated systematically. Additionally, a variety of original analyses and information resources are presented. This book should be of value to the student of the modern industrial society, to those seeking to forge policies appropriate to the new context of economic development, and to researchers who are confronting the challenges of the knowledge economy.
