Unfinished RKO Projects Marguerite H Rippey,2009-04-21 Orson Welles and the Unfinished RKO Projects A Postmodern Perspective traces the impact of legendary director Orson Welles on contemporary mass media entertainment and suggests that ironically we can see Welles s performance genealogy most clearly in his unfinished RKO projects Author Marguerite H Rippey provides the first in depth examination of early film and radio projects shelved by RKO or by Welles himself While previous studies of Welles largely fall into the categories of biography or modernist film studies this book extends the understanding of Welles via postmodern narrative theory and performance analysis weaving his work into the cultural and commercial background of its production By identifying the RKO years as a critical moment in performance history Rippey synthesizes scholarship that until now has been scattered among film studies narrative theory feminist critique American studies and biography Building a bridge between auteur and postmodern theories Orson Welles and the Unfinished RKO Projects offers a fresh look at Welles in his full complexity Rippey trains a postmodern lens on Welles s early projects and reveals four emerging narrative modes that came to define his work deconstructions of the first person singular adaptations of classic texts for mass media explorations of the self via primitivism and examinations of the line between reality and fiction These four narrative styles would greatly influence the development of modern mass media entertainment Rippey finds Welles s legacy alive and well in today s mockumentaries and reality television It was in early unfinished projects where Welles first toyed with fact and fiction and the pleasure of this interplay still resonates with contemporary culture As Rippey suggests the logical conclusion of Welles s career long exploration of truthiness lies in the laughs of fake news shows Offering an exciting glimpse of a master early in his career Orson Welles and the Unfinished RKO Projects documents Welles s development as a storyteller who would shape culture for decades to come God's Bits of Wood Ousmane Sembène,1995 God s Bits of Wood is a fictionalized account of the Dakar Niger train strikes which took in the 1940s The novel looks at both the political and personal sacrifices the strikers and their families made The political power is portrayed here as the strikers try to win back pensions annual paid vacations and family allowances from the Europeans The novel can be seen as a shift of power between the African strikers and their European bosses The Europeans have the political process and violence as a leverage of power which they use both insistently and mindlessly One of the European delegates for the railway company accidentally shoots young boys who are playing along the tracks The delegate isn't charged with their murders The Europeans also prevent the strikers and their families from having access to water Yet the strikers also have the masses as their power The strikers gain powerful allies in their own women In the beginning of the novel the women are not told the details of the strike though they are asked to support their men Only the small child Adjibidi shows any interest and insists that her grandfather take her to a meeting of the strikers Yet as the novel continues the women become more and more involved in the strike This is because the strike has hit home to them in a literal way There is no water nor food to eat The women and children begin to starve The women suffer in silence until they begin to fight back Two of the more striking sequences in the novel are the siege between the women of N'Diaye and the policemen who have come to arrest Ramatoulaye and leads to the burning down of the village and the march the women go on to Dakar to protest their treatment and to support the strikers The strike breaks down the barriers which cause inequality between men and women black and white from www.associatedcontent.com Oct 22 2010

Vetinde, Amadou T. Fofana, 2014-11-12 Undoubtedly one of Africa's most influential first generation of writers and filmmakers Ousmane Sembene's creative works of fiction as well as his films have been the subject of a considerable number of scholarly articles The schemas of reading applied to Sembene's oeuvre novels short stories and films have in the main focused either on his militant posture against colonialism his disenchantment with African leadership or his infatuation with documenting the past in an attempt to present a balanced and nuanced view of African history While these studies unquestionably contribute to a better understanding of his works they collectively ignore Sembene's relentless preoccupation with culture in his entire career as a writer and filmmaker The collection of essays in Sembene and the Politics of Culture sets out to fill that gap as the contributors at once foreground Sembene's fixation on the centrality of culture in the articulation of the discourse of national consciousness and reevaluate his intellectual and artistic legacy within an overarching framework of African liberation The contributors critically reassess the ideological underpinnings of Sembene's thoughts his role as one of the foundational pillars of African cultural production and his relevance in current discourses of nationhood They do so through a wide variety of interdisciplinary approaches that draw on linguistics feminist theory film theory historiography Marxist criticism psychoanalysis and a host of other approaches that give novel insights in the critical analysis of the works under study In the part entitled Testimonies a collection of conversations with people who worked closely with Sembene each of the interlocutors provide illuminating insights into the man's life and work The variety of themes and critical approaches in this critical anthology will certainly be of interest not only to students and scholars of African literature and cinema at various levels of intellectual and cultural sophistication but also anyone interested in the analysis of the nexus between power culture and the discourse of liberation

Third World Film Making and the West Roy Armes, 1987-07-29 This is the fully comprehensive account of film production in the Third World Although they are usually ignored or marginalized in histories of world cinema Third World countries now produce well over half of the world's films Armes places this huge output in a wider context examining the forces of tradition and colonialism that have shaped the Third World In addition to charting filmic developments too little known in Europe and the United States the book calls into question many of the assumptions that shape conventional film history It stresses the role of distribution in defining and limiting production queries simplistic notions of independent national cinemas and points to the need to take social and economic factors into account when considering authorship in cinema Above all the book celebrates the achievements of a mass of largely unknown film makers who in difficult circumstances have distinctively expanded our definitions of the art of cinema
