Mirroring this women s self directed violence has increasingly been thematised in diverse Japanese narrative and visual culture This book examines the relationship between normative femininity and women s self directed violence in contemporary Japanese culture To theoretically define the complexities that constitute normativity the book develops the concept of contradictive femininity and shows how in Japanese culture women s paradoxical roles are thematised through three character construction techniques broadly derived from the doppelg nger motif It then demonstrates how eating disorders and self harm are included in normative femininity and suggests that such self directed violence can be interpreted as coping strategies to overcome feelings of fragmentation related to contradictive femininity Looking at novels artwork manga anime TV dramas and news stories the book analyses both globally well known Japanese culture such as Murakami Haruki s literary works and Miyazaki Hayao s animation as well as culture unavailable to non Japanese readers The aim of juxtaposing such diverse narrative and visual culture is to map common storylines and thematisation techniques about normative femininity self harm and eating disorders Furthermore it shows how women s private struggles with their own bodies have become public discourse available for consumption as entertainment and lifestyle products Highly interdisciplinary it will be of huge interest to students and scholars of Japanese studies Japanese culture and society and gender and women s studies as well as to academics and consumers of Japanese literature manga and animation
