The New Mountaineer in Late Victorian Britain Alan McNee, 2017-04-18 This book is about the rise of a new ethos in British mountaineering during the late nineteenth century It traces how British attitudes to mountains were transformed by developments both within the new sport of mountaineering and in the wider fin de si cle culture The emergence of the new genre of mountaineering literature which helped to create a self-conscious community of climbers with broadly shared values coincided with a range of cultural and scientific trends that also influenced the direction of mountaineering. The author discusses the growing preoccupation with the physical basis of aesthetic sensations and with physicality and materiality in general, the new interest in the physiology of effort and fatigue, and the characteristically Victorian drive to enumerate, codify, and classify. Examining a wide range of texts from memoirs and climbing club journals to hotel visitors' books, he argues that the figure known as the New Mountaineer was seen to embody a distinctly modern approach to mountain climbing and mountain aesthetics.

The Heimat film genre, assumed to be outdated by so many, is very much alive. Who would have thought that this genre, which has been almost unanimously denounced within academic circles but which seems to resonate so deeply with the general public, would experience a renaissance in the 21st century? The genre's recent resurgence is perhaps due less to an obsession with generic storylines and stereotyped figures than to a basic human need for grounding that has resulted in a passionate debate about issues of past and present. This book traces the history of the Heimat film genre from the early mountain films to Fatih Akin's contemporary interpretations of Heimat. French Alps Michelin Travel Publications (Firm), 2001.
