Patrician Families and the Making of Quebec Brian Young, 2014-10-01 History has often ignored the influence in modern Quebec of family dynasties patriarchy seigneurial land and traditional institutions Following the ascent of four generations from two families through eighteenth century New France to the onset of the First World War Patrician Families and the Making of Quebec compares the French Catholic Taschereaus and the Anglican and English speaking McCords Consulting private institutional and legal archives Brian Young studies eight family patriarchs Working as merchants or colonial administrators in the first generation they became seigneurial proprietors officeholders and prelates The heads of both families used marriage arrangements land stewardship and judgeships to position their heirs Young shows how patriarchy was a central force in both domestic and public life as well as the ways in which Taschereau and McCord family strategies extended into the marrow of Quebec society through moral authority influence on national identities and their positions within senior offices in religious judicial and university institutions Through courthouses cemeteries belfries and their own chapels and neoclassical estates they created encompassing cultural landscapes Later generations used museums archives historian collaborators photography and modern print to elevate family achievement to the status of heroic national narratives Sagas of the monied and entrepreneurial nationalist imperatives to protect a vulnerable people and skepticism about the lasting power of great families and historical institutions have relegated the influence of the Taschereaus and McCords to obscurity Patrician Families and the Making of Quebec resuscitates the central role these elite families played in English and French Quebec

The Making and Unmaking of a University Museum Brian Young, 2000-05-18 Museums and cultural institutions across North America and Europe are being transformed by budget cuts re evaluation of their cultural missions evolving concepts of museology and changing audiences making Brian Young's trenchant history of a prestigious university museum Montreal's McCord Museum of Canadian History especially pertinent In The Making and Unmaking of a University Museum Young elucidates the relationship between museums and communities by examining the nineteenth century social context of the family who bequeathed their collection to McGill University and the collection's fate in an academic institution Tracing the museum's history from its founding by David Ross McCord he emphasizes the centrality of elite women to the culture of the museum and its survival in the twentieth century the museum's importance as the collective memory of Montreal's English speaking elite and the difficulty academic historians have had in dealing with material history He recounts a sorry tale of mismatched institutional and intellectual cultures that culminated in the university's transfer of custodial responsibility to a corporate museum board and the collapse of the museum's central research and conservation mandates The Making and Unmaking of a University Museum reveals the complex and often conflicting relationships between private collectors curators museum and university officials volunteers researchers philanthropic foundations the state and the public It shows how the makeup interests and perspectives of these groups have changed over the course of the century leading to the current crisis in which many museums are forced to function according to a corporate culture in which the dictates of audience size marketing and public relations experts dominate the priorities of curators and collections the needs of scholars and students and the interests of communities Young exposes the present day conflict between cultural institutions operating ahistorically and often without any social vision and a public demanding greater help in understanding the past It will be of interest to everyone who cares about culture museums and public memory Saint-Laurent Pierre Anctil,2002 Surveyors of Empire Stephen J. Hornsby,2011-04-05 Using research from both sides of the Atlantic Stephen Hornsby examines the development of British military cartography in North America during and after the Seven Years War as well as advancements in military and scientific equipment used in surveying At the same time he follows the land speculation of two leading surveyors Samuel Holland and J F W Des Barres and the publication history of The Atlantic Neptune Richly illustrated with images from The Atlantic Neptune and earlier maps Surveyors of Empire is an insightful account of the relationship between science and imperialism and the British shaping of the Atlantic world Montreal, City of Spires Clarence Epstein,2012-03-19T00:00:00-04:00 Of the fifty religious buildings discussed in this book only a precious few remain standing despite the fact that Montreal boasts one of the largest and most eclectic groupings of Georgian and Victorian structures of any city in North America Following the British conquest of New France in 1759 a remarkable series of transformations took place in the small Catholic trading town of Montreal Given the diversity of settlers forced to live side by side the new church buildings that were to rise became strategic public spaces meeting places as well as power bases It was no wonder that by the time Mark Twain toured Canada s first metropolis in the 1880s he found that one could not throw a brick in the place without breaking a church window By addressing the social religious and architectural issues surrounding these colonial era structures it will become apparent that Montreal was at once a shining jewel in England s imperial crown a chief outpost of Catholicism in the New World as well as the British North American headquarters for more than a dozen independent congregations *Canadian Books in Print.
