decision making and labor supply Receiving cash transfers mostly reduced women s reported ability to influence household decisions particularly regarding child healthcare The loss of control over decision making was greater for women with less than primary education Other effects of the program include a decline in women s employment and an increase in men s involvement in spheres of decision making usually controlled by women These results are robust to changes in model specification We present suggestive evidence from mediation analysis that the negative effects on women s control over decision making was directly related to these declines in employment and increase in men s involvement in female spheres The negative findings are not wholly supported by complementary qualitative work in which women reported more positive perceptions of the program s impacts Journal of the American Association of University Women ,1913 The Emerald International Handbook of Feminist Perspectives on Women’s Acts of Violence Stacy Banwell,Lynsey Black,Dawn K.
