Food Flavourings Philip R. Ashurst,2012-12-06 The flavour industry has become a vital element in the growth and success of food and beverage industries worldwide The development of many new products is now directly related to the use of the appropriate flavouring which among other benefits has allowed the use of many novel raw materials. The phenomenal growth of specialised consumer products offering special tastes, nutritional benefits or convenience almost always directly involves the use of a bespoke flavouring. With recent growth in worldwide concern for environmental issues has come a corresponding concern for the use of natural ingredients in foods. The flavour industry has been closely involved by offering many of its products as natural alternatives although the vexed issue of what natural means has promoted discussion and debate in many quarters. The European Flavouring Directive has attempted to incorporate a definition. This is discussed further in chapter 1. The work of the flavourist remains akin to that of the perfumer despite inroads made by sophisticated analytical technology. For example, use of linked gas chromatography mass spectrometry (GC/MS) instrumentation enables the skilled analyst to identify most components of a competitor's flavouring or the minor ingredients of a natural extract. Despite this, the industry remains a unique blend of art, science and technology in which the experience and knowledge of the flavourist is vital.

Consumer-Led Food Product Development Hal MacFie, 2007-06-30. Consumer acceptance is the key to successful food products. It is vital therefore that product development strategies are consumer led for food products to be well received. Consumer led food product development presents an up to date review of the latest scientific research and methods in this important area. Part one gives the reader a general introduction to factors affecting consumer food choice. Chapters explore issues such as sensory perception, culture, ethics, attitudes towards innovation and psychobiological mechanisms. Part two analyses methods to understand consumers' food related attitudes and how these methods can be effectively used, covering techniques such as means end chains and the food related lifestyle approach. The final part of the book addresses a wide variety of methods used for consumer led product development. Opportunity identification, concept development, difference testing and preference trials are discussed as well as the use of techniques such as just about right scales and partial least squares methods. Written by an array of international experts, Consumer led food product development is an essential reference for product developers in the food industry. Introduces the factors affecting consumer food choice. Explores issues such as sensory perception, culture and ethics. Analyses methods to understand food related attitudes.
