The Use of Mass Media as Propaganda

Protestant Reformation and the Printing Press

Propaganda is neutrally defined as a systematic form of purposeful persuasion that attempts to influence the emotions, attitudes, opinions, and actions of specified target audiences for ideological, political or commercial purposes through the controlled transmission of one-sided messages (which may or may not be factual) via mass and direct media channels.
-Richard Han Nelson

- The Medium Is The Message
- The written word: from printing to the internet
 - Interpersonal communication redefined
- Imagined Community
 - New resources with which to define, refine, and communicate with individual sense of "self"
 - Boundary of Transmission: bear little relationship to the geographical territory of any given nation state
- Internet techno-culture promises to reproduce elements of all other media / communication techno-cultures which have preceded it

"Technologies of transmission have taken a position of immense power and influence. Media now gets credit for shaping not only the information we distribute and consume, but our powers of perception, our political, social, and economic systems, and our general constructions of truth."

"The internet itself has become a box office from row seats to a rebellion"

In a society that breathlessly awaits "the new" in every student, what happens to last year's new?

Makers of the Media Mind Wm. David Sloan,2014-07-10 Makers of the Media Mind is a collection of analytical essays focusing on the most important and original ideas contributed to the field of mass communication by journalism educators. Divided into six sections representing the most prominent areas of specialization in the field, this text serves two significant purposes: first, it acquaints readers with the lives of preeminent journalism educators; second, it provides concise discussions and evaluations of the most compelling ideas those educators have to offer. The editor and contributors to this text contend that ideas cannot be appreciated fully without an understanding of the creators of those same ideas. They hope that this volume's coverage of creators as well as concepts will demonstrate that journalism education has played a critical role in the making of the media mind.

The Media and Political Change in Southeast Asia Jonathan Woodier, 2009-01-01. The book is in a comprehensive, readable format; the book is logically organised, rich in data and statistics regarding the issues that it covers, as well as accessibly written such that its points would not be lost on the average upper-level undergraduate student with some preparation in Asian studies and the social sciences.

Jane M. Ferguson, South East Asia Research: a serious academic work that should be on the official reading list of every media studies course.

Chris Roberts, Presenter, Sky News.

Jonathan Woodier has written an excellent book on the politics of media control in Southeast Asia. He shows how political elites in the region are using major events such as the 1997 Asian Financial Crisis and the 2001 September 11 terror attacks, as well as innovations in media tools such as public relations and the internet, to control information flow to their citizens. This book is a must-read for anyone interested in an explanation why Southeast Asian models of authoritarianism are surviving. A brilliant analysis, it combines media theory with a critical discussion of contemporary developments in Asia.

James Gomez, Keio University, Japan. True to the old Chinese adage, kill a chicken to scare a monkey: the few who once challenged Southeast Asia's ruling elites disappeared, and the majority were silent. Crude but effective. Modern times, however, demand a more sophisticated approach. Ruling elites now strip cultures naked and micro-manage people's minds. Their preferred tools of penetration and manipulation are a compliant media and a money-hungry PR industry. Jonathan Woodier's insights will ensure that you will never read a newspaper or watch TV news in quite the same way again.

Trevor Watson, Professional Public Relations Pty Ltd, Australia. This is an engaging and informative analysis of the media landscape in South East Asia. It uncovers the pervasive impact of the global media on the political process and raises important academic and policy issues in the process. This book is timely and will be a must-read for policymakers, academics, and students across communications, media studies, politics, and democratization, as well as for everyone with an interest in current-day developments in South East Asia.

Joep Cornelissen, Leeds University Business School, UK. Jonathan Woodier's latest work considers what impact the media has upon the democratization process in Southeast Asia. Has the media had a liberalizing effect, or become subject to elite control in Southeast Asia, and if so, why? What role does the global media play in this process, particularly given its conglomerization and commoditization? By examining the communications media and its relationship to political change in Southeast Asia, this fascinating study will endeavour to provide both a regional comparative analysis and a more balanced interpretation of the mass communication media in the wake of September 11 2001 The book also investigates the durability of authoritarian regimes and the enduring capacity of the media controlled state alongside the growing sophistication of political communications particularly the use of PR consultants The author provides an insider's view with unique insights into the practice of political communication and its development throughout the strategically important region of Southeast Asia with its large Moslem states as well as much further afield to countries such as China and post industrial Europe As such the book will be warmly welcomed by academics of politics international relations media communications and PR It will also appeal to researchers interested in political change the rise of the global media giants and the influence of authoritarian states such as China
