Progreb In Human African Trypanosomiasis Sleeping Sickneb:

Progress in Human African Trypanosomiasis, Sleeping Sickness Michel Dumas, Bernard Bouteille, Alain Buguet, 2013-12-01 Human African Trypanosomiasis HAT or sleeping sickness is an old disease to be now considered as reemergent HAT is endemic in 36 sub Saharan African countries in areas where tsetse flies are found The public health importance of HAT is underestimated but the disease causes severe social disruption in many rural areas Along the past fifteen years numerous studies were made and now the mechanisms involved in the disease pathogenesis and in the characteristics of sleep wake disruption become to be better understood But since 50 years when current drugs were introduced problems regarding HAT chemotherapy have not been solved Nevertheless in depth studies about trypanosome metabolism have permitted to discover new drug targets Written by specialists who are very experienced in their respective fields the contributions provide an indispensable tool for practitioners and scientists Progress in Human African Trypanosomiasis, Sleeping Sickness Michel Dumas, 1999 Control and Surveillance of Human African Trypanosomiasis, 2013 This report provides information about new diagnostic approaches new therapeutic regimens and better understanding of the distribution of the disease with high quality mapping The roles of human and animal reservoirs and the tsetse fly vectors that transmit the parasites are emphasized The new information has formed the basis for an integrated strategy with which it is hoped that elimination of HAT will be achieved The report also contains recommendations on the approaches that will lead to elimination of the disease Human African Trypanosomiasis HAT is a disease that afflicts populations in rural Africa where the tsetse fly vector that transmits the causative trypanosome parasites thrives There are two forms of HAT one known as gambiense HAT is endemic in West and Central Africa and causes over 95% of current cases the other known as rhodesiense HAT is endemic in East and southern Africa and accounts for the remainder of cases The presence of parasites in the brain leads to progressive neurological breakdown Changes to sleep wake patterns are among the symptoms that characterize the disease also known as sleeping sickness Eventually patients fall into a coma and die if not treated Different treatments are available against parasites present in the haemolymphatic system first stage and those that have entered the brain second stage Currently lumbar puncture is required to select the appropriate drug The Trypanosomiasis Ian Maudlin, P. H. Holmes, Michael A. Miles, 2004-07-09 This state of the art reference book includes comprehensive coverage of the biology and control of African Asian and South American trypanosomiasis sleeping sickness in man and animals It describes recent research developments in the biology and molecular biology of trypanosomes the protozoan parasite and their vectors and methods in diagnosis and control such as trapping tsetse fly vectors Different sections of the book are devoted to biology of trypanosomes vector biology epidemiology and diagnosis pathogenesis disease impact chemotherapy and disease control and vector control The book contains contributions from leading experts from Europe North and South America and Africa The Neuroscience of Sleep Robert Stickgold, Matthew P. Walker, 2010-05-22 Sleep is the natural state of bodily rest common to all mammals and birds and also seen in many reptiles amphibians and fish For most species regular sleep is essential for survival yet the specific purposes of sleep are still only partly clear and are the subject of intense research This volume is comprised of the editors selection of the most relevant articles on sleep from the Encyclopedia of Neuroscience resulting in the first comprehensive collection of introductory articles on the neuroscience of sleep Articles explore sleep s impact on neural functioning sleep disorders the relation between sleep and other clinical disorders a look at sleep from a developmental perspective and more Chapters offer impressive scope with topics addressing neural functioning disorders development and more carefully selected by one of the most preeminent sleep researchers Richly illustrated in full color with over 100 figures Contributors represent the most outstanding scholarship in the field with each chapter providing fully vetted and reliable expert knowledge

Human African Trypanosomiasis (Sleeping Sickness) Christian Burri,2020-06-17 As it is a goal to eliminate human African trypanosomiasis HAT sleeping sickness as a public health problem by 2020 and interrupt transmission by 2030 this is a good moment to reflect on what we have achieved what we want to achieve and what could get in our way HAT has a reputation for spectacular reappearances and the latest peak of 40 000 reported and over 300 000 estimated cases only dates back to 1998 Efforts of the WHO and partners as well as the development of simpler and much better tolerated treatments improved diagnostics and vector control tools made it possible to reduce this number by 95% Case identification and confirmation remain complex and require specific skills treatment remains error prone and reports on long term survivors have emerged and the relevance of the animal reservoir for T b gambiense HAT needs clarification In addition to win the end game against this massively stigmatized disease the human factor will play a key role This Special Issue addresses many of the burning topics about disease elimination in its 12 research and 7 review articles and one case study The papers critically reflect the approaches used investigate the mentioned challenges and propose novel approaches and interventions from various points of view
