Intellectual Property Rights in China Zhenqing Zhang, 2019-02-22 Over the past three decades China has transformed itself from a stagnant inward centrally planned economy into an animated outward looking decentralized market economy Its rapid growth and trade surpluses have caused uneasiness in Western governments which perceive this growth to be a result of China's rejection of international protocols that protect intellectual property and its widespread theft and replication of Western technology and products China's major trading partners particularly the United States persistently criticize China for delivering at best half hearted enforcement of intellectual property rights IPR norms Despite these criticisms Zhenqing Zhang argues that China does respect international intellectual property rights but only in certain cases In Intellectual Property Rights in China Zhang addresses the variation in the effectiveness of China's IPR policy and explains the mechanisms for the uneven compliance with global IPR norms Covering the areas of patent copyright and trademark Zhang chronicles how Chinese IPR policy has evolved within the legacy of a planned economy and an immature market mechanism In this environment compliance with IPR norms is the result of balancing two factors the need for short term economic gains that depend on violating others IPR and the aspirations for long term sustained growth that requires respecting others IPR In case studies grounded in theoretical analysis as well as interviews and fieldwork Zhang demonstrates how advocates for IPR typically cutting edge Chinese companies and foreign IPR holders can be strong enough to persuade government officials to comply with IPR norms to achieve the country's long term economic development goals Conversely he reveals the ways in which local governments protect IPR infringers because of their own political interests in raising tax revenues and creating jobs

The Institutional Transition of China's Township and Village Enterprises Hongyi Chen, 2017-11-22 This title was first published in 2000 This work provides a new insight into China's township and village enterprises TVEs It views the governance structure of TVEs as effectively combining the comparative advantage of local government officials in external management and of dual firm managers in internal management to overcome imperfections in both market and government during the transitional period Through extensive field investigation analysis and case studies this work shows that the governance structure of TVEs has been evolving during the past fifteen years To adapt to the changing environment TVEs have continuously innovated firm contractual form from a government official dominant fixed wage form to a partnership style profit sharing form then to a privatization oriented fixed rent form This work develops a complete model to explain how the central government's partial reform efforts in market liberalization have become the driving force to induce the contractual form innovation and to explicate how heterogeneity in firms technical structures and in local economic settings may affect local government's decisions regarding contractual form innovation Using the author's unique data set the model simulations predict that the development in the whole market system will result in the diffusion of contractual form innovation and lead to an induced privatization in this sector The following empirical studies show this to be a powerful prediction and the progress toward such induced privatization can be expected in China in near future This research work provides a rich empirical study on China's institutional transition towards a market system It explains how a bottom up endogenous instead of top down exogenous property rights reform can be realized in transitional economies This work will serve as a valuable reference for researchers and students in economics economic development and institutional economics and especially for those interested in research
