Stallard, Julie S. Cocker, 2001 How can educators survive in the whirlwind restructuring and reform caused by the digital age Will the impact of information technology improve learning and how The Promise of Technology in Schools answers these questions by surveying the next 20 years in education First Stallard examines why the transfer of technology to education has taken so long and has been so difficult to accomplish Then he examines what challenges educators will face how technology will affect school organization why the K 12 education market is so important and more Rethinking Education in the Age of Technology Allan Collins, Richard Halverson, 2018 The digital revolution in education is well under way with more and more learners plugged into the online world How can schools make the most of both the technology and the learning potential of today's born digital students In this new edition of their groundbreaking book Collins and Halverson argue that new technologies have transformed our workplaces our lives and our culture and it is time we take the next step to transform learning in and out of schools The authors show how over time public schooling was so successful that it became synonymous with education But new technologies risk making schools obsolete and this book explains why and how today's educators policymakers and communities must adapt to provide all learners with access to the new learning tools of the 21st century Allan Collins and Richard Halverson are not by any means arguing that teachers or schools should go away Rather they are saying that they should open their doors and windows connect to other real and virtual places be crucial tour guides and send their children on flights of fancy through our modern memory palaces From the Foreword by James Paul Gee Arizona State University The most convincing account I've read about how education will change in the decades ahead the authors' analyses are impressive fair minded and useful Howard Gardner Harvard Graduate School of Education from first edition Magnet and Specialized Schools of the Future Edwin T. of Technology in Schools The Next Twenty Years Fifteen years after its publication they find little significant difference in the way K 12 schools are using technology to improve student achievement Education Technology and the Failure of American Schools offers a broad and penetrating look at the American educational system to determine why progress is so lacking What is found is a system that has far outlived its functionality in terms of governance organization and professional practices American schools are compared to those of nations whose students regularly outperform them on international tests of achievement The authors offer a bold approach to educational reform that will irritate many who now consider themselves educational leaders The final chapter makes offers a new approach to education in the primary grades one that will surprise those lobbying for more computers for those early learning years This is a must read for anyone concerned about American education The contributors of this book Offer clear examples of what is missing in the average school experience Explain why teaching and school administration are not true professions Discuss levels of failure from the federal level to the local school administration Describe how the present system came into being Compare educational reform efforts with those in actual professions Explain the basic misapplication of technology in the present system
