

Relative Pronouns & Adverbs

Grade 4

Common Core Alignment

The relative adverbs (where, when or why) introduce a group of words, or a clause, that tells more about a noun. Here are two sentences with and without the use of a relative adverb:

- This is a soccer field.
- This is a soccer field where I played last summer.

A relative pronoun is a type of pronoun that often introduces dependent (or relative) clauses in sentences. The five main relative pronouns are who, whom, whose, which, and that.

The relative pronoun which adds unnecessary information about things and should always be set off by commas. The relative pronoun that adds necessary information about things and is not set off by commas. Here are two examples:

- We walked to the park, which has an enormous soccer field.
- We walked to the park that has a soccer field.

Who or Whom?

If you can rewrite the sentence using the object pronouns him, her or them, whom should be used. If you can rewrite it with he, she or they, then who is more appropriate.

- I do not know whom the coach invited to the practice.
- The coach invited him to the practice.
- James is the player who is fast and strong.
- He is fast and strong.
