The Institutions of Land Property Rights in China Denggao Long, Xiang Chi, 2024-10-29 This book provides a comprehensive study of land property rights and transaction systems in late imperial China specifically during the period of 1560-1950. The book introduces the work of two key scholars working in Chinese economic history and land property history synthesizing existing research with important new findings. The book traces the evolving nature of Chinese land property rights over time discussing changing influences and contexts. It discusses the traditional role of small individual family farms and how these differed from the manor economy of early modern Europe leading to a substantial middle class of peasant farmers with relative economic and social stability as well as how this has uniquely shaped Chinese economic development in the long run. Chapters explore the different ways that private, corporate and state publicly owned land co-existed in China during this period with an in-depth examination of the impact of land conditional sale and huomai revocable sale customs on the protection of smallholders in the face of advancing agricultural technological and political reforms. The book also discusses the diversity of types of land transactions including sales, rent, deposits, tenancies and mortgages and how these changed in different dynasties as well as the economic and political implications of the globalizing 20th century and growth of the free market for Chinese property. Combining a long-run perspective with highly detailed analysis of Chinese property customs, this book will be a valuable resource for economic historians, researchers of agricultural history and those interested in the history of China.

Living with the Land Liesbeth van de Grift, Dietmar Müller, Corinna R. Unger, 2022-11-07 For a long time agriculture and rural life were dismissed by many contemporaries as irrelevant or old fashioned Contrasted with cities as centers of intellectual debate and political decision making the countryside seemed to be becoming increasingly irrelevant

Today politicians in many European countries are starting to understand that the neglect of the countryside has created grave problems. Similarly, historians are remembering that European history in the twentieth century was strongly influenced by problems connected to the production of food, access to natural resources, land rights, and the political representation and activism of rural populations. Hence, the handbook offers an overview of historical knowledge on a variety of topics related to the land. It does so through a distinctly activity-centric and genuinely European perspective. Rather than comparing different national approaches to living with the land, the different chapters focus on particular activities, from measuring to settling the land, from producing and selling food to improving agronomic knowledge, from organizing rural life to challenging political structures in the countryside. Furthermore, the handbook overcomes the traditional division between East and West, North and South by embracing a transregional approach that allows readers to gain an understanding of similarities and differences across national and ideological borders in twentieth-century Europe. Grounded Authority Shiri

Pasternak, 2017-06-06 Western Political Science Association's Clay Morgan Award for Best Book in Environmental Political Theory; Canadian Studies Network Prize for the Best Book in Canadian Studies; Nominated for Best First Book Award at NAISA; Honorable Mention Association for Political and Legal Anthropology Book Prize. Since Justin Trudeau's election in 2015, Canada has been hailed internationally as embarking on a truly progressive post-postcolonial era, including an improved relationship between the state and its Indigenous peoples. Shiri Pasternak corrects this misconception, showing that colonialism is very much alive in Canada. From the perspective of Indigenous law and jurisdiction, she tells the story of the Algonquins of Barriere Lake in western Quebec and their tireless resistance to federal land claims policy. Grounded Authority chronicles the band's ongoing attempts to restore full governance over its lands and natural resources through an agreement signed by settler governments almost three decades ago, an agreement the state refuses to fully implement. Pasternak argues that the state's aversion to recognizing Algonquin jurisdiction stems from its goal of perfecting its sovereignty by replacing the inherent jurisdiction of Indigenous peoples with its own delegated authority. From police brutality and fabricated sexual abuse cases to an intervention into and overthrow of a customary government, Pasternak provides a compelling, richly detailed account of rarely documented coercive mechanisms employed to force Indigenous communities into compliance with federal policy. A rigorous account of the incredible struggle fought by the Algonquins to maintain responsibility over their territory, Grounded Authority provides a powerful alternative model to one nation's land claims policy and a vital contribution to current debates in the study of colonialism and Indigenous peoples in North America and globally. The Complexity of Rural Migration in China Xiong Fengshui, 2020-12-30 This book examines socio-economic relationships and cultural changes in contemporary rural China, focusing on the experience of a typical Chinese village, the working-age population of which has been hollowed out by outbound labor migration. The volume sheds light on the inherent complexity of peasants' material, economic, and emotional dependency on the countryside and how these relationships shape their experience of migration and the personal transformation that comes with it Simplistic binaries such as traditional and modern are left to one side in favour of a multifaceted approach to understanding the interactions among people institutions and the natural environment The book will appeal to academics of sociology and anthropology and general readers interested in China s rural society
