September Storm:

Hurricane Floods of September 1938 Carl G. Paulsen, 1940 The Philosophy of Storms James Pollard Espy, 1841

Mississippi after Katrina Jennifer Trivedi, 2020-11-24 Hurricane Katrina made landfall on the American Gulf Coast on August 29 2005 Biloxi Mississippi a small town on the coast was one of the towns devastated directly by the storm Drawing on ethnographic media and historic document research and analysis Jennifer Trivedi explores the pre disaster cultural historical social political and economic distinctions that shaped the recovery of Biloxi and Biloxians Trivedi examines how networks of people groups and institutions worked to prepare for and recover from the hurricane reinforcing the distinctions that existed before the storm NOAA Technical Report ERL. Protection, Wrightsville Beach, North Carolina United States. Army. Corps of Engineers. Wilmington District, 1982 The scope of the study will address the identification of needs and development of plans related to beach erosion control and hurricane protection at Wrightsville Beach The scope of the study will also encompass the range of economic environmental and other impacts associated with implementation of shore protection improvements Page 1 Spatial and Temporal

Variations of the Turbulent Fluxes of Heat, Momentum, and Water Vapor Over Lake Ontario During IFYGL Bradford R. Bean, 1975 During the 1972 IFYGL alert periods the highly instrumented NOAA RFF DC 6 aircraft was used to record the time series of wind temperature and water vapor at heights ranging from 18 to 300 m above the surface of Lake Ontario The aircraft was equipped with a gust probe system a fast response thermistor a microwave refractometer for water vapor measurements and a downward pointing IR system as well as the normal in flight measurement of standard meteorological parameters The time series records have been found to display a highly intermittent nature This is especially the case for evaporation when in the fall Polar Continental outbreaks move across the lake In particular such an outbreak of cold dry air moved across the lake at 12 15 m s⁻¹ on 9 October 1972 This resulted in the air temperature at 30 m above the lake to drop from 12 to 6 °C while the evaporation rate increased to more than 1 cm day⁻¹ This may be compared with the 0.5 cm day⁻¹ normal evaporation observed in the tropics during BOMEX Furthermore IR lake surface temperatures show cold regions 5 °C along the north shore presumably due to strong upwelling while the center and south shore regions of the lake were of the order of 12 to 15 °C The turbulent flux quantities of momentum heat and water vapor were obtained by the eddy correlation technique and their spectra were determined at several locations over the lake surface for 3 minute sampling lengths At the aircraft speed of 92 m s⁻¹ this represents a flight path of 17 km for both along wind and constant fetch patterns The spectra demonstrate the tendency for the peak value to march to higher wavelengths with increasing height Rainfall

Water-supply Paper ,1945 Physics of Lakes Kolumban Hutter,Yongqi Wang,Irina P. Chubarenko,2011-07-29 The overwhelming focus of this 2nd volume of Physics of Lakes is adequately expressed by its subtitle Lakes as Oscillators It deals with barotropic and baroclinic waves in homogeneous and stratified lakes on the rotating Earth and comprises 12 chapters starting with rotating shallow water waves demonstrating their classification into gravity and Rossby waves for homogeneous and stratified water bodies This leads to gravity waves in bounded domains of constant depth Kelvin Poincaré and Sverdrup waves reflection of such waves in gulfs and rectangles and their description in sealed basins as barotropic inertial waves proper The particular application to gravity waves in circular and elliptical basins of constant depth leads to the description of Kelvin type and Poincaré type waves and their balanced description in basins of arbitrary geometry on the rotating Earth Consideration of two three and n layer fluids with sharp interfaces give rise to the description of gravity waves of higher order baroclinicity with experimental corroboration in a laboratory flume and e g in Lake of Lugano Lake Banyoles and Lake Biwa Barotropic wave modes in Lake Onega with complex geometry show that data and computational output require careful interpretation Moreover a summer field campaign in Lake of Lugano and its two layer modal analysis show that careful statistical analyses of the data are requested to match data with computational results Three chapters are devoted to topographic Rossby waves Conditions are outlined for which these waves are negligibly affected by baroclinicity Three classes of these large period modes are identified channel modes so called Ball modes and bay modes often with periods which lie very close together The last chapter deals with an entire class of Chrystal type equations for barotropic waves in elongated basins which incorporate the effects of the rotation of the Earth

Tempest Liz Skilton,2019-06-01 Liz Skilton's innovative study tracks the naming of hurricanes over six decades exploring the interplay between naming practice and wider American culture In 1953 the U S Weather Bureau adopted female names to identify hurricanes and other tropical storms Within two years that convention came into question and by 1978 a new system was introduced including alternating male and female names in a pattern that continues today In Tempest Hurricane Naming and American Culture Skilton blends gender studies with environmental history to analyze this often controversial tradition Focusing on the Gulf South the nation's hurricane coast Skilton closely examines select storms including Betsy Camille Andrew Katrina and Harvey while referencing dozens of others Through print and online media sources government reports scientific data and ephemera she reveals how language and images portray hurricanes as gendered objects masculine named storms are generally characterized as stronger and more serious while feminine named storms are described as unladylike and in need of taming Further Skilton shows how the hypersexualized rhetoric surrounding Katrina and Sandy and the effeminate depictions of Georges represent evolving methods to define and explain extreme weather events As she chronicles the evolution of gendered storm naming in the United States Skilton delves into many other aspects of hurricane history She describes attempts at scientific control of storms through hurricane seeding during the Cold War arms race of the 1950s and relates how Roxcy Bolton a member of the National Organization for Women led the crusade against feminizing hurricanes from her home in Miami near the National Hurricane Center in the 1970s Skilton also discusses the skyrocketing interest in extreme weather events that accompanied the introduction of 24 hour news coverage of storms as well as the impact of social media networks on Americans tracking and understanding of hurricanes and other disasters The debate over hurricane naming continues as Skilton demonstrates and many Americans question the merit and purpose of the gendered naming system What is clear is that hurricane names matter and that they fundamentally shape our impressions of storms for good and bad
