SERMON XX THE SOUL S DEPENDENCE ON CHRIST AND VICTORY BY HIM WITHOUT ME YE CAN DO NOTHING John xV
5 I CAN DO ALL THINGS THROUGH CHRIST WHICH STRENGTHENETH ME Phil iv 13 In the two members of this double text are affirmations of both the weakness and the power belonging to us Without me ye can do nothing from the lips of the Redeemer signifies our complete dependence I can do all things through Christ strengthening me the exulting claim of an Apostle exposes the breadth of our liberty And inasmuch as they who can do all things ought to do greatly this sinless boast of Paul challenges us with a grand ideal It utters a stimulating call to our spiritual energies In this twofold bearing the text is only true to the profound facts of our nature and our position We are experience and analysis equally confirm it we are both weak and strong both dependent and free Our probation is balanced between these conflicting conditions Preached before the Autumnal Convention at Worcester Mass October 20 1853 There precisely is the problem we are to work out and there is the sharp strain of our discipline God knew that just these conditions were the most fruitful for producing moral maturity Looking at our duty from one side it would seem as if all we have to do is to put forth our moral energies to act Looking at it from another side it would seem as if our chief business is to appreciate what Christ does for us to realize that we belong to him To learn how to adjust these elements how to combine and manage both our large birthright of freewill and its humbling limitations how to use our ability nobly and at the same time to draw the grace of submission out of our insignificance
