On The Fringes Of History A Memoir:

On the Fringes of History Philip D. Curtin, 2005 In the 1950s professional historians claiming to specialize in tropical Africa were no more than a handful The teaching of world history was confined to high school courses and even those focused on European history Philip Curtin developed a sound methodology for teaching world history and always a controversial figure revived the study of the history of the Atlantic slave trade His career stands as an example of the kind of dissatisfaction and struggle that brought about a sea change in higher education Curtin founded African Studies and the Program in Comparative World History at Wisconsin and Johns Hopkins universities programs that produced many of the most influential Africanists from the 1950s into the 1990s Written with economy and telling detail On the Fringes of History follows Curtin from his beginnings in West Virginia in the 1920s This memoir beautifully illustrated with Curtin's photographs tracks the emergence of American interest and engagement with the wider world and writes an important chapter in the history of twentieth century academia

Living concepts Marleen Reichgelt e.a., 2021-10-28 How do concepts such as the body intimacy adventure and intersectionality shape our engagement with gender history In this 40th anniversary edition of the Yearbook we revisit the question how concepts live in gender research practices and what it means to do gender history in 2021 Contributors include experienced researchers who have spent years sometimes decades contemplating the conceptual background of their work as well as scholars who have come to the field more recently and who therefore provide a different insight As such this Yearbook shows how certain concepts travel within academic culture across the Low Countries revealing not so much the theoretical underpinnings of the field but rather how these theoretical underpinnings find a home in individual research practices and may be used in surprising ways

History of the Principle of Interference of Light N. Kipnis, 2012-12-06 The controversy between the wave theory and the emission theory of light early in the nineteenth century has been a subject of numerous studies Yet many issues remain unclear in particular the reasons for rejecting Young's theory of light It appears that further progress in the field requires a better grasp of the overall situation in optics and related subjects at the time and a more thorough study of every factor suggested to be of importance for the dispute This book is intended to be a step in this direction It examines the impact of the concept of interference of light on the development of the early nineteenth century optics in general and the theory of light in particular This is not a history of the wave theory of light nor is it a history of the debate on the nature of light in general it covers only that part of the controversy which involved the concept of interference Although the book deals with a number of scientists scientific institutions and journals its main character is a scientific concept the principle of interference While discussing the reasons for accepting or rejecting this concept I have primarily focused on scientific factors although in some cases the human factor is examined as well The book is a revised Ph D dissertation University of Minnesota 1984 writ ten under Alan E Shapiro A History of Optics from Greek Antiquity to the Nineteenth Century Olivier Darrigol,2012-01-26 This book is a long term history of optics from early Greek theories of vision to the nineteenth century victory of the wave theory of light It shows how light gradually became the central entity of a domain of physics that no longer referred to the functioning of the eye it retraces the subsequent competition between medium based and corpuscular concepts of light and it details the nineteenth century flourishing of mechanical ether theories The author critically exploits and sometimes completes the more specialized histories that have flourished in the past few years The resulting synthesis brings out the actors long term memory their dependence on broad cultural shifts and the evolution of disciplinary divisions and connections Conceptual precision textual concision and abundant illustration make the book accessible to a broad variety of readers interested in the origins of modern optics a history of the theory of elasticity , A History of the Theory of Elasticity and of the Strength of Materials, from Galilei to the Present Time: Galilei to Saint-Venant, 1639-1850.-v. 2. pt. 1-2. Saint-Venant to Lord Kelvin Isaac Todhunter,1886 A History of the Theory of Elasticity and of the Strength of Materials Isaac Todhunter,1886 A History of the Theory of Elasticity and of the Strength of Materials: Galilei to Saint-Venant, 1639-1850.-v. 2. pt. 1-2. Saint-Venant to Lord Kelvin Isaac Todhunter,1886 History of the Inductive Sciences William Whewell,1866 The Griqua Past and the Limits of South African History, 1902-1994 Edward Cavanagh,2011 The Griqua people are commonly misunderstood Today they do not figure in the South African imagination as other peoples do nor have they for over a century This book argues that their comparative invisibility is a result of their place in the national narrative In this revisionist analysis of South African historiography the author analyses over a century s worth of historical studies and identifies a number of narrative frameworks that have proven resilient to change over this time The Griqua in particular have fared poorly compared to other peoples They appear in and disappear from this body of work in a number of consistent ways almost as though scholars have avoided re imagining their history in ways relevant to the present This book questions why that might be the case Killing Times David Wills,2019-03-05 Killing Times begins with the deceptively simple observation made by Jacques Derrida in his seminars on the topic that the death penalty mechanically interrupts mortal time by preempting the typical mortal experience of not knowing at what precise moment we will die Through a broader examination of what constitutes mortal temporality David Wills proposes that the so called machinery of death summoned by the death penalty works by exploiting or perverting the machinery of time that is already attached to human existence Time Wills argues functions for us in general as a prosthetic technology but the application of the death penalty represents a new level of prosthetic intervention into what constitutes the human Killing Times traces the logic of the death penalty across a range of sites Starting with the legal cases whereby American courts have struggled to articulate what methods of execution constitute cruel and unusual punishment

Wills goes on to show the ways that technologies of death have themselves evolved in conjunction with ideas of cruelty and instantaneity from the development of the guillotine and the trap door for hanging through the firing squad and the electric chair through today's controversies surrounding lethal injection. Responding to the legal system's repeated recourse to storytelling, prosecutors and politicians' endless recounting of the horrors of crimes, Wills gives a careful eye to the narrative even fictive spaces that surround crime and punishment. Many of the controversies surrounding capital punishment, Wills argues, revolve around the complex temporality of the death penalty: how it works in conjunction with forms of suspension or extension of time; how its seeming correlation between egregious crime and painless execution is complicated by a number of different discourses. By pinpointing the temporal technology that marks the death penalty, Wills is able to show capital punishment's expansive reach, tracing the ways it has come to govern not only executions within the judicial system but also the opposed but linked categories of the suicide bombing and drone warfare. In discussing the temporal technology of death, Wills elaborates the workings both of the terrorist who produces a simultaneity of crime and punishment that bypasses judicial process and of the security state in whose remote control killings the time-space coordinates of justice are compressed and at the same time disappear into the black hole of secrecy. Grounded in a deep ethical and political commitment to death penalty abolition, Wills's engaging and powerfully argued book pushes the question of capital punishment beyond the confines of legal argument to show how the technology of capital punishment defines and appropriates the instant of death and reconfigures the whole of human mortality.

Recasting the Past Derek R. Peterson, Giacomo Macola, 2009-09-15 The study of intellectual history in Africa is in its infancy. We know very little about what Africa's thinkers made of their times. Recasting the Past brings one field of intellectual endeavor into view. The book takes its place alongside a small but growing literature that highlights how in autobiographies, historical writing, fiction, and other literary genres, African writers intervened creatively in their political world The past has already been worked over by the African interpreters that the present volume brings into view African brokers pastors journalists kingmakers religious dissidents politicians entrepreneurs all have been doing research conducting interviews reading archives and presenting their results to critical audiences Their scholarly work makes it impossible to think of African history as an inert entity awaiting the attention of professional historians Professionals take their place in a broader field of interpretation where Africans are already reifying editing and representing the past The essays collected in Recasting the Past study the warp and weft of Africa's homespun historical work Contributors trace the strands of discourse from which historical entrepreneurs drew highlighting the sources of inspiration and reference that enlivened their work By illuminating the conventions of the past Africa's history writers set their contemporary constituents on a path toward a particular future History writing was a means by which entrepreneurs conjured up constituencies claimed legitimate authority and mobilized people around a cause By illuminating the spheres of debate in which Africa's own scholars participated Recasting the Past repositions the practice of modern history
