Arms, Economics and British Strategy G. C. Peden, 2007-02-08 This book integrates strategy technology and economics and presents a new way of looking at twentieth century military history and Britain's decline as a great power G C Peden explores how from the Edwardian era to the 1960s warfare was transformed by a series of innovations including dreadnoughts submarines aircraft tanks radar nuclear weapons and guided missiles He shows that the cost of these new weapons tended to rise more quickly than national income and argues that strategy had to be adapted to take account of both the increased potency of new weapons and the economy's diminishing ability to sustain armed forces of a given size Prior to the development of nuclear weapons British strategy was based on an ability to wear down an enemy through blockade attrition in the First World War and strategic bombing in the Second and therefore power rested as much on economic strength as on armaments

The Last Centurion John Ringo, 2008-08-01 Centurions were the guardians of Rome At the height of the Roman Republic there were over five thousand qualified Roman Centurions in the Legions To be a Centurion required that in a mostly illiterate society one be able to read and write clearly to be able to convey and create orders to be capable of not only performing every skill of a Roman soldier but teach every skill of a Roman soldier Becoming a Centurion required intense physical ability courage beyond the norm years of sacrifice and a total devotion to the philosophy which was Rome When Rome fell to barbarian invaders there were less than five hundred qualified Centurions Not because Rome had fewer people but because it had fewer willing to make the sacrifices And the last Centurions left their shields in the heather and took a barbarian bride We are The Last Centurions At the publisher's request this title is sold without DRM Digital Rights Management
