Sixty Folk-Tales from Exclusively Slavonic Sources Albert Henry Wratislaw,2011-11-04 There was a king who was already old and had but one son Once upon a time he called this son to him and said to him My dear son you know that old fruit falls to make room for other fruit My head is already ripening and maybe the sun will soon no longer shine upon it but before you bury me I should like to see your wife my future daughter My son marry The prince said I would gladly father do as you wish but I have no bride and don t know any The old king put his hand into his pocket took out a golden key and showed it to his son with the words Go up into the tower to the top story look round there and then tell me which you fancy The prince went without delay Nobody within the memory of man had been up there or had ever heard what was up there When he got up to the last story he saw in the ceiling a little iron door like a trap door It was closed He opened it with the golden key lifted it and went up above it There there was a large circular room The ceiling was blue like the sky on a clear night and silver stars glittered on it the floor was a carpet of green silk and around in the wall were twelve high windows in golden frames and in each window on crystal glass was a damsel painted with the colours of the rainbow with a royal crown on her head in each window a different one in a different dress each handsomer than the other and it was a wonder that the prince did not let his eyes dwell upon them When he had gazed at them with astonishment the damsels

began to move as if they were alive looked down upon him smiled and did everything but speak Now the prince observed that one of the twelve windows was covered with a white curtain he drew the curtain to see what was behind it There there was a damsel in a white dress girt with a silver girdle with a crown of pearls on her head she was the most beautiful of all but was sad and pale as if she had risen from the grave The prince stood long before the picture as if he had made a discovery and as he thus gazed his heart pained him and he cried This one will I have and no other As he said the words the damsel bowed her head blushed like a rose and that instant all the pictures disappeared When he went down and related to his father what he had seen and which damsel he had selected the old king became sad bethought himself and said You have done ill my son in uncovering what was curtained over and have placed yourself in great danger on account of those words That damsel is in the power of a wicked wizard and kept captive in an iron castle of all who have attempted to set her free not one has hitherto returned But what s done cannot be undone the plighted word is a law Go try your luck and return home safe and sound The prince took leave of his father mounted his horse and rode away in search of his bride It came to pass that he rode through a vast forest and through the forest he rode on and on till he lost the road And as he was wandering with his horse in thickets and amongst rocks and morasses not knowing which way to turn he heard somebody shout behind him Hi stop The prince looked round and saw a tall man hastening after him Stop and take me with you and take me into your service and you won t regret it Who are you said the prince and what can you do My name is Long and I can extend myself Do you see a bird s nest in that pine yonder I will bring you the nest down without having to climb up Long then began to extend himself his body grew rapidly till it was as tall as the pine he then reached the nest and in a moment contracted himself again and gave it to the prince You know your business well but what s the use of birds nests to me if you can t conduct me out of this forest Ahem that s an easy matter said Long and began to extend himself till he was thrice as high as the highest fir in the forest looked round and said Here on this side we have the nearest way out of the forest He then contracted himself took the horse by the bridle and before the prince had any idea of it they were beyond the forest Before them was a long and wide plain and beyond the plain tall gray rocks like the walls of a large town and mountains overgrown with forest trees Monaghan
