Burkinshaw, 2015-05-26 Why are there so few women vice chancellors in UK higher education In this book Paula Burkinshaw explores the contemporary conversation around the missing women at the top across UK society through in depth interviews with the hitherto silent voices of women vice chancellors These women have successfully negotiated with and navigated the gendered leadership cultures of higher education throughout their careers and speak of the masculine communities of their workplaces Advocating the need to achieve a critical mass of women at the top this book suggests there is still much to be done in the higher education sphere Invisible Until Needed Elizabeth Davis-Russell, 2025-03-11 I was spurred to write this book while witnessing the insurrection of January 6 2021 at the US Capitol Building As an immigrant who came from a developing country that had been wrecked by a series of civil wars I was shocked by what I saw on the television screen because not in my wildest dream had I ever envisioned something of this magnitude occurring in the USA Having seen the destruction that civil wars had wrecked on not only the infrastructure but the minds of people where children were turned into vicious killers and ordered to kill their parents and rape of women was used to terrorize villagers into submission I had often boasted that as Americans we should be grateful that war had not occurred on our soil in our lifetime What I witnessed on the television screen on January 6 2021 violated every tenet of democracy It was what America had often used to describe what happens in third world countries banana republics But here it was in living color for the world to see occurring in the beacon of hope the shining city on the hill the bastion of democracy As an immigrant who came to the United States of America from one of the sh*le countries I felt a sense of utter betrayal more compounded than the sense I experience every day as a Black woman navigating the minefields of racism and sexism

This book traces my journey of more than thirty five years in predominantly White colleges and universities where Black women constituted a small segment of the population making me very much a minority in majority institutions As a Black woman I was often the only one or the obligatory second And as Black women in higher education attest we are often invisible to our colleagues during critical decisions or social events but visible to fill two boxes on necessary forms race and gender As Black women in many of those institutions we encounter the illusion of inclusion but are jettisoned into reality when we find we are left out of the meetings before and after the formal regularly scheduled meetings and lunches where plans are hatched and important decisions made During formal meetings we may naively think that discussions are imminent and that our input is important only to realize that the decisions have been made and that the discussion is a sham

Gender Equality Programmes in Higher Education Sabine Grenz, Beate Kortendiek, Marianne Kriszio, Andrea Löther, 2009-11-10 Gender equality has been on the agenda of national policies of higher education within and outside the European Union EU for the last twenty years In some European countries this process was initiated early on and has brought about remarkable results while in others progress has been slower Different countries and institutions have focussed on different strategies for raising awareness about the discrimination of women and for increasing the number of women in academia particularly in leadership positions Previous research on gender equality in higher education has produced many case studies about programmes at institutions of higher education in Europe and elsewhere Different actors like the European Commission and national organisations have also furnished reports about national policies Building on this material it is now time to analyse under what conditions equality programmes are successful For a deeper understanding of the mechanisms of and barriers to gender equality in higher education we also need studies that focus on the development of gender equality policies in different countries as well as on conditions of implementation change of strategy and the evaluation of results Comparative studies would be another useful tool for understanding the development and success of gender equality programmes
