Shadows Issues And Social Problems In Canada:

How Claims Spread Joel Best, Best's anthology examines for the first time how diverse social issues road rage the metric system gun control and abortion are among those included migrate across national boundaries modifying themselves from place to place as a result of different claims claimsmakers and policy responses This unique collection assembled from new research by an international group of social problems scholars will fill a gap in undergraduate and graduate level studies in the constructionist analyses of social problems as well as in political science public policy and criminology Claims concerning one social problem often influence those about another claimsmakers borrow rhetoric and tactics from one another In some cases experienced claimsmakers join efforts to call attention to other social problems compelling images e g the threatened child or random violence link claims about different problems and reactions to one set of claims These case studies describe very different processes ranging from deliberate attempts to disseminate social problem claims to developments that were more inadvertent from successes in which social problem constructions spread to new countries to failures in which claims were sown but failed to take root They are intended to suggest that the diffusion of social problems is neither simple nor automatic Joel Best is professor and chair Department of Sociology and Criminal Justice University of Delaware He has served as an editorial advisor for Aldine that has produced fifty titles Shadows Anthony Synnott,1996

In the Shadow of the Law James G. Snell, 1991 The sanctity of marriage and family life was virtually beyond question in the eyes of Canadian society during the early part of the twentieth century Powerful elements within society had created these values and worked hard to maintain them Assumptions about the family helped to shape the political social economic and legal structures of Canada The divorce laws served to maintain the status quo in familial values and gender based attitudes enforcing official standards of morality family structure and sexual conduct James G Snell examines the divorce laws of this period and the efforts of those who confronted the social pressures and challenged the divorce system In view of the considerable authority of the divorce environment and the broad social support of the status quo their efforts are striking An increasingly assertive group of Canadians particularly women defied the social taboos regarding divorce claiming priority for their own marital needs They manipulated the Canadian divorce process taking advantage of existing loopholes in some instances and creating others when necessary They insisted on the primacy of their own marital problems and in doing so resisted the immediate authority of the divorce environment while at the same time seeking the sanction of that authority This was true not only for those using the formal divorce system but also for many who resorted to informal processes of divorce These pioneer divorces led the way in creating a modern Canadian divorce system based on consensual dissolution of marriage and relying on the courts less for arbitration between contending parties than for endorsement of a privately determined pact
