

A person is seen from behind, wearing a dark t-shirt, with their hands clasped behind their head in a gesture of distress or contemplation. They are standing in front of a large, heavily damaged building with crumbling walls and exposed wooden beams. The scene is set at sunset or sunrise, with a warm, orange glow in the sky. The overall mood is one of hardship and seeking solace.

Who Pays for Car Accidents? Estate of Jerry J. Phillips, Stephen Chippendale, 2001-12-18 In this new volume two lawyers debate which kind of automobile insurance is the best no fault or tort liability This book presents in one place all the legal political historical and financial arguments about the two types of auto insurance Under the fault system currently used by thirty seven states tort law provides that the party at fault in the accident pays the full damages of accident victims Jerry J Phillips favors this system arguing that it allows for fair compensation to the injured and deters drivers from dangerous behavior on the road Stephen Chippendale counters this claim with the argument that tort law based insurance combines high cost and low benefits and that those who truly profit from it are the lawyers representing injured clients while their claims clog up the court system A better solution he proposes

Empire of Texts in Motion Karen Laura Thornber, 2020-10-26 By the turn of the twentieth century Japan s military and economic successes made it the dominant power in East Asia drawing hundreds of thousands of Chinese Korean and Taiwanese students to the metropole and sending thousands of Japanese to other parts of East Asia The constant movement of peoples ideas and texts in the Japanese empire created numerous literary contact nebulae fluid spaces of diminished hierarchies where writers grapple with and transculture one another s creative output Drawing extensively on vernacular sources in Japanese Chinese and Korean this book analyzes the most active of these contact nebulae semicolonial Chinese occupied Manchurian and colonial Korean and Taiwanese transculturations of Japanese literature It explores how colonial and semicolonial writers discussed adapted translated and recast thousands of Japanese creative works both affirming and challenging Japan s cultural authority Such efforts not only blurred distinctions among resistance acquiescence and collaboration but also shattered cultural and national barriers central to the discourse of empire In this context twentieth century East Asian literatures can no longer be understood in isolation from one another linked only by their encounters with the West but instead must be seen in constant interaction throughout the Japanese empire and beyond

Saintly Women Nancy Nienhuis, Beverly Mayne Kienzie, 2017-12-12 This ground breaking volume assesses the contemporary epidemic of intimate partner violence and explores how and why cultural and religious beliefs serve to excuse battering and to work against survivors attempts to find safety Theological interpretations of sacred texts have been used for centuries to justify or minimize violence against women

The authors recover historical and especially medieval narratives whose protagonists endure violence that is framed by religious texts or arguments. The medieval theological themes that redeem battering in saints' lives, suffering, obedience, ownership, and power continue today in most religious traditions. This insightful book emphasizes Christian history and theology but the authors signal contributions from interfaith studies to efforts against partner violence. Examining medieval attitudes and themes sharpens the readers' understanding of contemporary violence against women. Analyzing both historical and contemporary narratives from a religious perspective grounds the unique approach of Nienhuis and Kienzle, one that forges a new path in grappling with partner violence. Medieval and contemporary narratives alike demonstrate that women in abusive relationships feel the burden of religious beliefs that enjoin wives to endure suffering and to maintain stable marriages. Religious leaders have reminded women of wives' responsibility for obedience to husbands even in the face of abuse. In some narratives, however, women create safe places for themselves. Moreover, some exemplary communities call upon religious belief to support their opposition to violence. Such models of historical resistance reveal precedents for response through intervention or protection.

Don't Fix Me; I'm Not Broken Sally Patton, 2011-06-16

Most of us want to be able to parent from a place of peace no matter what is happening around us, no matter what struggles our children are having. Don't Fix Me; I'm Not Broken: Changing Our Minds about Ourselves and Our Children takes us on a spiritual parenting journey to learn what it means to parent from love instead of fear.

Domesticating the Reformation Mary Hampson Patterson, 2007

This book rescues three little-known bestsellers of the English Reformation and employs them in an examination of intellectual and religious revolution. How did sixteenth-century English Protestant manuals of private devotion often to be read aloud stream continental theology into the domestic contexts of parish, school, and home? Patterson elucidates ideological programs presented in key texts in light of evolving patterns of public and private worship; she also considers the processes of transmission by which complex doctrinal debates were packaged for cultivating an everyday piety in a confusing age of inflammatory politicized religion. It is in the most prosaic challenges of daily realities that the deepest opportunities lie for experiencing the divine. Intersecting issues of piety, rhetoric, and the devotional life of the home, this book brings to life reformists' endeavors to guide popular responses to the Protestant revolution itself.
