On The Riverbank:

Reflections from the Riverbank Lyal LeClair Fox, 2000 Corey was just a tired old man who wanted nothing more than to be home for Christmas He had experienced more than his share of sadness and heartache during his lifetime and most of it he would just as soon forget This train ride home a train ride that would take him back in time would cause him to live through it all again and end with a miracle What happened toward the end of this train ride was more than even Corey could believe Was it some kind of divine intervention or the lack thereof that would explain these strange events Either way one thing we can be certain of they did happen How or why no one will ever know This story was inspired by actual events so you be the judge

Rainfall Infiltration Modeling Renato Morbidelli, Carla Saltalippi, Alessia Flammini, 2020-12-02

Rainfall infiltration is an important component of the hydrologic cycle and plays a crucial role in the formation of surface runoff providing subsurface water that governs the water supply for agriculture the transport of pollutants through the vadose zone and the recharge of aquifers The spatiotemporal evolution of the infiltration rate under natural conditions cannot currently be deduced by direct measurements at any scale of interest Therefore the use of infiltration modeling is of fundamental importance in applied hydrology and allows this process to be described through measurable quantities In spite of the continuous development of infiltration modeling in recent decades the estimation of infiltration at different spatial scales i e from the local to watershed scales remains a complex problem because of the natural spatial variability of both soil hydraulic characteristics and rainfall For many years research activity has been limited to the development of local or point infiltration models for vertically homogeneous soils with flat surfaces Recent scientific literature has extended infiltration modeling to many other involved elements whose representation however still represents an open problem In this context this volume attempts to make a contribution to the modeling of point infiltration into vertically non uniform soils or soils modified by human activities infiltration over horizontal heterogeneous areas infiltration into soil surfaces with significant slopes interaction between the infiltration process and the groundwater system and infiltration due to irrigation and the surface water groundwater dynamics U.S. Geological Survey Bulletin ,1983 Geological Survey Bulletin ,1987 On
