After fleeing over the Carpathian Mountains into Hungary eight-year-old Yulian and his resourceful but self-involved mother Barbara are on board a ship to Rio de Janeiro to await their turn for immigration to the United States. A former Warsaw socialite Barbara has no marketable skills only her looks wits and courage. Paying their way by selling the diamonds she had concealed in her clothing they land in Brazil with only the diamond engagement ring on her finger. Somehow it must finance both their stay and eventual passage to New York. Yulian a sensitive Jewish boy raised by an overprotective devoutly Catholic nanny has difficulty interacting with other children and concludes that God is punishing him for abandoning Judaism. Complicating matters he falls in love with a beautiful but significantly older fellow refugee Irenka who has been hired to take him to the beach. When his mother meets a man she truly cares for Yulian hopes he has finally found his long sought after father figure But Barbara s European upper class values clash with her suitor s Latin ardor leaving Yulian in the middle of a misaligned courtship which he desperately wants to set right Eventually Yulian resolves his spiritual issues with the help of a celebrated Polish poet and his own teddy bear His ambitious mother however must choose between a man she truly loves and her future in America
