Reading New York:

Reading New York John Tytell, 2003 Part biography part memoir part belles lettres this wonderful book celebrates the act of reading the writers whose work awakened the soul of a young man growing up in New York in the 1940s and 1950s and the history of the city itself Reading New York opens with 12 year old John Tytell confined by eye problems to a darkened room discovering Billy Budd sailing Melville's ocean by flashlight in bed Vividly capturing the excitement of his first encounter with a masterpiece Tytell goes deeper to expose the heart of Melville's story and of the writer's life He weaves the same kind of spell from memory language and experience in evoking his encounters with the work of the other writers who figured as milestones in his own coming of age Poe Whitman Henry Miller Henry James And completing the book's vivid narrative is Tytell's story his family's flight from Antwerp after the Nazi invasion his own life in New York as a child as an adolescent and as an adult still moved by the books that helped shape him Acclaimed for his biographies of Ezra Pound and the Beats Tytell now gives us a brilliant hybrid acutely perceptive literary criticism that is as well an intimate exploration of the experience of literature and of a city steeped in literary lore

New York Magazine, 1978-01-16 New York magazine was born in 1968 after a run as an insert of the New York Herald Tribune and quickly made a place for itself as the trusted resource for readers across the country With award winning writing and photography covering everything from politics and food to theater and fashion the magazine's consistent mission has been to reflect back to its audience the energy and excitement of the city itself while celebrating New York as both a place and an idea

The Psychology of Reading

Mildred C. Robeck, Randall R. Wallace, 2017-11-06 The need to know why as well as how children and youth respond as they do to reading instruction has guided the selection of this book's content The second edition of this title originally published in 1990 has retained and elaborated upon the three major themes previously presented that reading is a linguistic process that motivation the affective domain may be as important in learning to read as the cognitive domain and that the reality of learning theory is to be found in the mechanisms of the brain where information is mediated and memory traces are stored The text integrates views from cognitive psychology psycholinguistics and neuropsychology as they relate to reading and writing A learning motivation model is provided to present associative learning conceptualization and self directed reading in a hierarchical relationship with distinct cognitive and affective components The distinction between beginning and proficient reading is maintained throughout the text
