Hamm, 1987-03-09 More than 450 years after their birth in the Anabaptist movement 125 years after their secession from Russian Mennonitism and 60 years after their immigration to Canada the Mennonite Brethren exhibit specific and measurable signs of sectarian viability and religious vitality To explain the persistence of the sect Hamm analyses the process of sacralization within the Canadian Mennonite Brethren Church which safeguards identity a system of meaning or a definition of reality and the process of secularization which erodes boundaries dislodges stable structures and destroys identity It is an oversimplification the author argues to insist that the factors of continuity ethical and cognitive norms family solidarity ethnicity worship evangelism community and church structures and service agencies are solely integrative and that the factors of change urbanization education occupational change and economic affluence are solely disruptive. Instead, a complex dialectic between the two processes is at work that prevents restrictive rigidity within the sect and excessive accommodation to the host society. According to the author, this analysis of the Canadian Mennonite Brethren becomes a case study to test the utility of an identity theory of religion which hinges on the integration-differentiation dialectic. It is at the same time a serious self-study in religious sociology by which the author seeks to gain a better understanding of the processes of growth and decline of continuity and change and of the ongoing tension resulting from the religious movement's confrontation with society.

The Aging Experience Cherry Russell, 2024-05-10

Local writing on the subject of old age had tended to a fairly uniform approach focusing on empirical studies of old age as a social problem using census and survey type data. Little attention had been paid to theory development. Originally published in 1981, this book provides an in-depth study of how old age was experienced in contemporary Australian society at the time. It was the first major piece of original research on aging to be published in Australia and in several important senses represented a clear departure from the mainstream of Australian gerontology. The Aging Experience links original in-depth data to a broad theoretical framework. Working from the premise that old age is a devalued status, it examines the implications of this for the personal experience and interpersonal relations of elderly people. Through detailed case studies of elderly Australians, their interaction with family, age peers, and welfare services are described. The analysis concentrates less on the overt characteristics of these relationships and their material functions than on their symbolic content and meaning for the participants. Thus, the study moves beyond conventional statistical documentation of the problems of old age to a sharper delineation of aging as a lived experience. It is an approach which offers new perspectives and challenges many of the assumptions underlying previous research.
