Twenty first century school leaders are charged with transforming and supporting the institutional practice of teachers and establishing and maintaining the culture of the school in an effort to improve student achievement Reeves 2004 Research indicates that principals often lack the necessary knowledge and skills to effectuate change or to utilize reflective practices to improve teaching learning leading and the conditions in which they occur With reflective practice being recognized as a vital element in the skill set of successful principals Schon 1983 this study sought to discover 1 the extent to which elementary school principals consider reflective practice to be a leadership priority 2 the various ways elementary school principals report they are using reflective practice and 3 the factors and conditions elementary principals report foster or inhibit their capacity to be reflective practitioners Sixty elementary school principals from Massachusetts and Rhode Island participated in the phenomenological study Both qualitative and quantitative data were garnered through an anonymous online survey and follow up focus group interviews Survey responses were sought using a four point Likert Scale multiple choice options and open ended questions Focus group questions were drawn from survey responses to gather supplemental information Analysis of data revealed the following findings a participants do not consider reflective practice to be a leadership priority b participants do not consider themselves to be effective as self reflective practitioners or in helping teachers to be reflective practitioners c participants do not use a variety of reflective practices d participants identified factors and conditions they perceive as necessary to increase their capacity to be reflective practitioners and e participants cite many barriers to using reflective practice Findings of this study support the research and literature on reflection and reflective practice as being critical to improving schools Study results may provide educators with insights into how reflective practice can improve leadership practices aimed at improving teaching and learning This study may also provide support for superintendents school committees policy makers and leadership development programs in giving deeper consideration and commitment for the use of reflective practice in leading the improvement of schools

Reflective Practice of Multi-Unicultural School Leaders Dr. Roberto F. Casas, Dr. Paul A. Rodríguez, 2012-02-21 We have written this book because of our unique and real concern for improving education for children who are at risk of school failure Whether these students are of different ethnicities or speak different languages the students are not failures but have difficulty maneuvering in a system we call school In order to improve education we have to improve schools and the practices of school leaders This transformation of schools requires change and improvement of individuals in school leadership positions In order to change school leaders and their practices toward improvement we must replicate what is working for kids through reflective practice Osterman and Kottkamp 1993 offered this perspective We believe that reflective practice an approach to educational improvement that is both situational and places the professional in the very center of the attempt to create improvement not only stands in contrast to most other current ideas but has the greatest potential of any approach improving individuals and through them schools and education p vii The book was written because we share professional practices and intellectual interests in reflection and reflective practice We are passionate that reflection has the best hope and significant change in how leaders examine their personal beliefs values and behaviors in such a way that members of the school community realize that it is they who must adapt their practices to meet the needs of students at risk and the diverse communities they serve However before we discuss the importance of reflective practice we need to arrive at a definition of reflective practice Schon 1983 defines reflective practice as the capacity to reflect on action so as to engage in a process of continuous learning Similarly Bolton 2010 stated that reflective practice involves playing critical attention to practical values and theories which inform everyday action by examining practice reflectively and reflexively This leads to developmental insight Another idea by Boud et al 1985 states Reflection is an important human activity in which people recapture their experience think about it mull it over and evaluate it It is this working with experience that is important in learning As for education Larrivee 2000 argues Reflective practice refers to the process of the educator studying his or her own teaching methods and determining what works best for students It involves the consideration of the ethical consequences of classroom procedures on students

Didaktik and to communicate its potential relevance to English language curricularists and teacher educators It introduces a theoretical tradition which although very different in almost every respect from those we know offers a set of approaches that suggest ways of thinking about problems of reflection on curricular and teaching praxis the core focus of the tradition which the editors believe are accessible to North American readers with appropriate translation These ways of thinking and related praxis are very relevant to notions such as reflective teaching and the discourse on teachers as professionals By raising the possibility that the new tradition of Didaktik can be highly suggestive for thinking through issues related to a number of central ideas within contemporary discourse and for exploring the implications of these ideas for both teacher education and for a curriculum theory appropriate to these new contexts for theorizing this book opens up a gold mine of theoretical and practical possibilities The Teacher's Reflective Practice Handbook Paula Nadine
