Reflections on Communication, Education, Scholarship, and Life Xin-An Lu, 2003-07-06 Our actions in education business and government are no longer guided by conscious ideals but by entrenched practices that are products of expediency indolence and even tyranny Inveterate and ubiquitous problems abound Students hate school Employees dislike their jobs Professors become disinclined toward teaching Boredom and procrastination are everywhere There are promotion requirements such as scholarly publications by college professors that promote nothing and benefit none except to move the person into the next nominal category along the spectrum of the organizational ladder We are plagued with senseless competitive patterns and numerical evaluations that make life a mere matter of rat race the winning of which does not uplift us into the sublimity of humanity but trammel us in the degradation of being rats Essays in this book reflect on and search for answers to widespread and inveterate problems that degenerate modern life into mere livelihood Products in sober solitude rather than in the societal cacophony most essays in the book were written during the author's doctoral studies

Phronesis as Professional Knowledge Elizabeth Anne Kinsella, Allan Pitman, 2012-07-30 Phronesis is the Aristotelian notion of practical wisdom In this collected series phronesis is explored as an alternate way of considering professional knowledge In the present context dominated by technical rationalities and instrumentalist approaches a re examination of the concept of phronesis offers a fundamental re visioning of the educational aims in professional schools and continuing professional education programs This book originated from a conversation amongst an interdisciplinary group of scholars from education health philosophy and sociology who share concerns that something of fundamental importance of moral significance is missing from the vision of what it means to be a professional The contributors consider the ways in which phronesis offers a generative possibility for reconsidering the professional knowledge of practitioners The question at the centre of this inquiry is If we take phronesis seriously as an organising framework for professional knowledge what are the implications for professional education and practice A multiplicity of understandings emerge as to what is meant by phronesis and how it might be reinterpreted understood applied and extended in a world radically different to that of the progenitor of the term Aristotle For those concerned with professional life this is a conversation not to be missed

Reflecting on the Inevitable Peter J. Adams,2020-03-09 Death studies have over the last twenty years witnessed a flourishing of research and scholarship particularly in areas such as dying and bereavement cultural practices and fear of dying But despite its importance a specific focus on the nature of personal mortality has attracted surprisingly little attention Reflecting on the Inevitable combines evidence from several disciplinary fields to explore the varying ways each of us engages with the prospect of personal mortality Chapters are organized around the question of how an ongoing relationship might be possible when the threat of consciousness coming to an end points to an unspeakable nothingness The book then argues that despite this threat an ongoing relationship with one's own death is still possible by means of conceptual devices or enabling frames that help shape personal mortality into a relatable object In each chapter the subtleties and applicability of key ideas are enhanced through a series of illustrative narratives built up around the lives of four people at different ages living in two adjacent houses Reflecting on the Inevitable is relevant not only to academics of death studies but also those training and practicing in people helping professions as well as anyone experiencing or attempting to make sense of major life events

Autoethnography is a method of research that involves describing and analyzing personal experiences in order to understand cultural experiences. The method challenges canonical ways of doing research and recognizes how personal experience influences the research process. Autoethnography acknowledges and accommodates subjectivity, emotionality, and the researcher's influence on research. In this book, the authors provide a historical and conceptual overview of autoethnography. They share their stories of coming to autoethnography and identify key concerns and considerations that led to the development of the method. Next, they outline the purposes and practices, the core ideals of autoethnography, how autoethnographers can accomplish these ideals, and why researchers might choose to do autoethnography. They describe the processes of doing autoethnography, conducting fieldwork, discussing ethics in research, and interpreting and analyzing personal experience, and they explore the various modes and techniques used and involved in writing autoethnography. They conclude with goals for creating and assessing autoethnography and describe the future of autoethnographic inquiry. Throughout, the authors provide numerous examples of their work and share key resources. This book will serve as both a guide to the practices of doing autoethnography and an exemplar of autoethnographic research processes and representations. Academic Libraries: Reflecting on Crisis, the Fourth Industrial Revolution and the Way
