The politics that drive corporate governance (CG) reforms in industrialised countries have become an important topic in comparative politics and political economy at least since Mark Roe's seminal book (Roe 2003). He develops the thesis that insider-orientated corporate governance systems, where large shareholders have close ties with managers and monitor them directly, emerge as an investor reaction to strong social democratic parties. Social democratic power explains hence cross-national differences in corporate governance. John W. Cioffi and Martin Höpner's (2006) proposed a 'partisan' theory based on the 'political paradox of finance capitalism', which states that – contrary to Roe's claim – in many countries during the 1990s social democratic parties were the driving force of shareholder-orientated reforms. Social democratic power favoured hence the emergence of outsider CG systems, which are characterised by the absence of large shareholders, the disciplining of corporate insiders by (financial) markets and the existence of hostile takeovers. 'Coalitional approaches', constitute a third group of theories, which consider that coalitions between interest groups representing labour, capital and managers, not political parties, explain a given corporate governance outcome (Gourevitch & Shinn 2005).

Two recent books, by John W. Cioffi and Pepper Culpepper respectively, make important contributions to this ongoing debate about what political factors determine different structures of corporate control across countries. Both books explicitly address recent research on institutional change in comparative political economy; in particular theories of institutional change as rule-taker driven and incremental processes (Streeck & Thelen 2005; Mahony & Thelen 2010). However, the two books contribute in quite different ways to this literature.

Cioffi's main contribution is to draw our attention to the increasing importance of 'regulatory politics' in an era where legal rules become more and more. He focuses therefore on top-down – i.e. rule-maker driven – processes of institutional change, which have recently been somewhat marginalized in favour of bottom-up processes.

Culpepper on the other hand takes the precise opposite view, reaffirming the importance of not only considering formal legal rules (formal institutions), but also informal institutions in order to fully understand the politics of corporate governance.

The books use hence two fundamentally different approaches. Yet, they reach in part quite similar conclusions. Importantly, both authors rehabilitate in some sense out-of-favour 'punctuated equilibrium' concepts of institutional change underscoring the importance of periodic crises in making quite radical change possible (Cioffi 2010: 137; Culpepper

Political Economy and the Aid Industry in Asia J. Hutchison, W. Hout, C. Hughes, R. Robison, 2015-12-25 Adopting a distinctive structural political economy approach this book uniquely explains the blind spots of alternative political economy approaches to international aid and presents an original framework for evaluating likely reformers strength of commitment and potential alliances with donors

The Politics of Poverty Reduction Paul Mosley, 2012-03-29 Globally there is a commitment to eliminate poverty and yet the politics that have caused anti poverty policies to succeed in some countries and to fail in others have been little studied The Politics of Poverty Reduction focuses on these political processes Analysis is based partly on global comparisons and partly on case studies of nine countries that span the developing world Where governments are politically weak they need to make alliances with other groups to stay in power and where these have been with low income groups the result may be a lasting and effective pro poor strategy Often pro poor policies have been brought in not with progressive intentions but out of fear that the state will fall apart unless pro poor elements are incorporated into government and the most effective regimes in reducing poverty have seldom been the kindest and most benevolent The ability to provide the poor with access to key markets and in particular labour and capital is crucial and this in turn requires fiscal strength Two crucial elements in the story are the ability to frame labour intensive policies given that labour is often the only thing that poor people are able to sell and the design of effective tax and expenditure policies Aid donors can make a key contribution partly through reinforcing recipients fiscal capacity but much more through providing technical support of the right kind

Startup Capitalism Robyn Klingler-Vidra, Ramon Pacheco Pardo, 2025-04-15 In Startup Capitalism Robyn Klingler Vidra and Ramon Pacheco Pardo explore the place of startups in contemporary East Asian economies The last few decades have seen East Asian governments provide increasing support for startups new high growth technologically oriented firms Yet as the authors observe such initiatives do not necessarily benefit the growth of startups as challengers to large established firms Rather they often enable startups to function as boosters for the competitiveness of these firms Startups in short are both disruptors to and resources for big businesses Klingler Vidra and Pacheco Pardo demonstrate this dual role by examining the evolution of startup centric policies in Japan South Korea Taiwan and China They show that in the region what they call startup capitalism an economic and political system in which startups contribute to employment innovation and growth can take multiple forms Rich with empirical detail Startup Capitalism reveals how and why startups can end up working with or even for large firms to drive a country s technological capabilities

Work in a Metro Anuradha Kalhan, 2017-12-06 This volume is about why work changed to become more precarious around the turn of the century This happened not just in the developed world but also inside sectors that were demarcated as organized and modern within developing countries like India In these sectors unlike the greater part of the Indian economy insecure jobs were uncommon before winds of change made them normal This shift had occurred before the great global financial crisis of 2008 Between 2005-8 a survey based on over thousand structured interviews with workers in offices factories shops and establishments below the supervisory rank in Mumbai was undertaken This is the innovative segment of the book which tries to measure and quantify some of these changes and their associations It is designed to investigate the central proposition of the Insecurity Hypothesis IH which is that the economic risk of increased and global competition was being progressively passed on from the employer to the employee This was happening through shortened job tenure erratic remuneration variable work contingent employment and institutional changes that remove or reduce protection bargaining power of employees in the work place everywhere The corollary is that widespread and unremitting work and income related insecurity is an expedient competitive strategy but a damaging socio economic phenomenon Please note Taylor Francis does not sell or distribute the Hardback in India Pakistan Nepal Bhutan Bangladesh and Sri Lanka

Economic Transitions to Neoliberalism in Middle-Income Countries Alfredo Saad-Filho, Galip L. Yalman, 2009-12-04 This book argues that neoliberalism is the contemporary form of capitalism focusing on a materialist understanding of its workings as a modality of social and economic reproduction and its everyday practices of dispossession and exploitation

Metropolitan Regions, Planning and Governance Karsten Zimmermann, Daniel Galland, John Harrison, 2019-10-24 The aim of this book is to investigate contemporary processes of metropolitan change and approaches to planning and governing metropolitan regions To do so it focuses on four central tenets of metropolitan change in terms of planning and governance institutional approaches policy mobilities spatial imaginaries and planning styles The book's main contribution lies in providing readers with a new conceptual and analytical framework for researching contemporary dynamics in metropolitan regions. It will chiefly benefit researchers and students in planning, urban studies, policy, and governance studies, especially those interested in metropolitan regions. The relentless pace of urban change in globalization poses fundamental questions about how to best plan and govern 21st century metropolitan regions. The problem for metropolitan regions, especially for those with policy and decision-making responsibilities, is a growing recognition that these spaces are typically reliant on inadequate urban economic infrastructure and fragmented planning and governance arrangements. Moreover, as the demand for more appropriate, i.e., more flexible, networked, and smart forms of planning and governance increases, new expressions of territorial cooperation and conflict are emerging around issues and agendas of development, infrastructure expansion, and the collective provision of services. American Book Publishing Record, 2003

State Structure, Policy Formation, and Economic Development in Southeast Asia Antoinette R.

Raquiza, 2013-06-17 Why do some small developing countries industrialize and others don't? What factors account for different economic performance among states that are vulnerable to external shocks, crony capitalism, and political instability? This book argues that the answer lies in the structuring of state power, specifically the way different sets of governing elites, political leaders, and economic technocrats are embedded in political organizations and state institutions and the way these elites relate to each other in the economic development policy process. Conducting a comparative historical analysis of Thailand and the Philippines, the book argues that the institutional settings of governing elites influence economic outcomes. In Thailand, political power traditionally connects to state institutions in ways that has limited the impact of political turnovers and global downturns conducive to long-term industrial activities. In contrast, Philippine state power derives from family networks that merge social and political power suited to fast-moving short-term commercial interests. In focusing on this political and institutional story, the author analyses the current development dilemmas of countries weighed down by historical legacies of unstable regimes, dependency, and social conflict and how they are likely to develop in the future.
