Computing Anticipatory Systems American Institute of Physics, 2000-06-15 This proceedings volume contains foundation of anticipation in any system and applications in all the areas of science economy biology cognition physics robotics etc Strong anticipatory systems deal with systems which behave in taking into account past present and computed future states The new mathematical and computational tools of incursion and hyperincursion are developed in this way In weak anticipatory systems the future states are predicted from models of these systems The domain of computing anticipatory systems is becoming a new frontier of science

A General Framework Integrating Techniques for Scheduling Under Uncertainty Julien Bidot, 2005 The research literature about task planning and scheduling under uncertainty comprises a large number of models resolution techniques and systems and it is difficult to compare them with existing terminologies However we have identified three general families of approaches that can be used to structure the literature based on the way decisions are taken In addition we propose a generation and execution model for scheduling under uncertainty that integrates these three families of approaches This model is an automaton that develops when the current schedule is no longer executable or when some particular conditions are met The third part of this thesis concerns our experimental study On top of ILOG Solver and Scheduler we have implemented a software prototype in C directly instantiated from our generation and execution model We present new probabilistic scheduling problems and a constraint based approach combined with simulation to solve some instances thereof

A New Robust Optimization Approach for Scheduling Under Uncertainty Xiaoxia Lin, 2001

Sequencing and Scheduling with Inaccurate Data Yuri N. Sotskov, 2014 In many real world applications the problems with the data used for scheduling such as processing times set up times release dates or due dates is not exactly known before applying a specific solution algorithm which restricts practical aspects of scheduling theory During the last decades several approaches have been developed for sequencing and scheduling with inaccurate data depending on whether the data is given as random numbers fuzzy numbers or whether it is uncertain ie it can take values from a given interval This book considers the four major approaches for dealing with such problems a stochastic approach a fuzzy approach a robust approach and a stability approach Each of the four parts is devoted to one of these approaches First it contains a survey chapter on this subject as well as between further chapters presenting some recent research results in the particular area The book provides the reader with a comprehensive and up to date introduction into scheduling with inaccurate data The four survey chapters deal with scheduling with stochastic approaches fuzzy job shop scheduling min max regret scheduling problems and a stability approach to sequencing and scheduling under uncertainty This book will be useful for applied mathematicians students and PhD students dealing with scheduling theory optimisation and calendar planning

Scheduling Under Unavailability Constraints to Minimize Flow-time Criteria Imed Kacem, 2007 In this chapter we considered the non resumable version of scheduling problems under availability constraint We addressed the criterion of the weighted sum of the completion times We presented the main works related to these problems This presentation shows that some problems can be efficiently solved as an example some proposed FPTAS have a strongly polynomial running time As future works the idea to extend these results to other variants of problems is very interesting The development of better approximation algorithms is also a challenging subject
