

1 Images of girl offenders in theory and policy: institutional responses to girls

Of all the vulgar crimes of escaping from the consideration of the effect of social and moral influences on the human mind, the most vulgar is that of attributing the dimensions of conduct and character to inherent natural differences.

J. M. Mill, Principles of Political Economy, 1848

Responses to female offenders present a confusing patchwork of images. On the one hand, a female offender or delinquent is seen as "weak", "suffering" and "depressed", and, therefore, in need of protection. On the other hand, her offending is associated with "uncontrollable tendency" as with the rejection of prescribed feminine roles (e.g., through aggressive behaviour) and therefore, she is an object of condemnation and contempt. In both cases, however, there is perhaps a further tendency to perceive the female as a creature of impulse, easily swayed by emotion and, in the extreme cases, incapable of fully understanding her own actions (Harris, 1961). This frequently leads to the misperception of her behaviour as mentally abnormal or unstable. Moreover, there is ample evidence that females are sentenced to the less "criminally inclined" than males, less culpable, and so on. When they do offend, their actions are, for the most part, perceived as being symptomatic of a "cry for help" requiring individualised help and understanding, actions resulting from a troubled home situation, the innocent, and not with general consciousness as "keeping at home" and with domestic life.

These themes emerged in early theories about female criminality and in period responses to women and girls. But the themes have been well rehearsed in recent years.¹ In this chapter I shall concentrate on the responses to girl delinquents and explore my critique of the imagery of theories to a discussion of the general evolution of early theories and writings about female offenders which is often neglected: the politics of sex differences.

Girls are different from boys, or so it is assumed by those professionals and practitioners (for example police, probation officers, educational welfare officers, social workers, teachers and magistrates) who deal with them. It is argued that girls need a different kind of handling from boys within the criminal justice system and allied agencies. This claim is not a new one. From the eighteenth century onwards there is considerable

Sexism And The Female Offender An Organizational Analysis:

Sexism and the Female Offender Loraine Gelsthorpe, 1989 Sexism and the Female Offender Loraine Gelsthorpe, 1989 This study examines the treatment of young females in three modern criminal justice settings a secure assessment centre a detention centre and a police juvenile bureau to examine how sexism operates in an administrative context The author reviews the literature as well as the work of the organizations concluding that images of female offenders are mediated by a host of factors which cannot be linked directly to sexist ideology While not dismissing sexism completely it highlights the importance of administrative and organizational influences in the development of specific images of females such as the meaning of trouble for the agencies their micro politics etc The Female Offender Meda Chesney-Lind, Lisa Pasko, 2013 The Female Offender challenges the long standing tradition of male dominated criminology theory and research which has taken little or no account of gender differences Race, Gender, and Class in Criminology Dragan Milovanovic, Martin D. Schwartz, 2015-12-22 These essays first published in 1996 focus on class race and gender as organising and analytical concepts in criminology For many years their importance in studying how the world relates to crime and its control was minimized or ignored It is clear however that these concepts are of critical importance in understanding societal issues especially crime and societal responses to it This title will be of interest to students of criminology Feminist Theories of Crime Merry Morash, 2017-07-05 This collection re imagines the field of criminology with insights gleaned from feminist theory Works included here illustrate that gender is a key organizing principle of social life This means that men and women have gender that patriarchy as well as gender must be theorized and that other systems of oppression such as race and class must also be studied to fully understand the crime problem and the criminal justice system Finally the articles collected here exemplify the feminist concern for thinking consciously about how and why we do our research with the crucial goal of producing knowledge that will promote social justice Working with Women Offenders in the Community Rosemary Sheehan, Gill McIvor, Chris Trotter, 2010-12-21 Though many more women offenders are supervised in the community than in custody much less is known about their needs and effective approaches to their supervision support and treatment Whilst there has been recent attention paid to responding to the needs of women in prison negligible attention has been paid to women exiting prison or on community based orders and what is needed to work with them to reduce re offending or entry into prison Contributions to this book challenge policy makers and corrections systems to concentrate more on community provision for women offenders and resist popular calls for more punitive responses to all offenders women included Contributors come from a wide range of countries including Australia Canada UK and USA They argue that the criminogenic lens applied to women s offending must be gender responsive if systems are to be successful at addressing the disadvantage and risk associated with offending behaviour Working With Women Offenders in the Community builds on ideas presented in the editors previous book What Works With Women Offenders 2007 extending the focus particularly on women offenders in the community rather than in prison This book concentrates on women who have committed criminal offences and who may have been placed on probation or other community based court orders or who have been released from prison on parole It discusses the work done by professional workers including probation officers community corrections officers and specialist case managers in areas such as drug treatment housing mental health or employment programmes This book will be of interest to professional probation officers case managers drug treatment workers and others who work with women offenders It will also be essential reading for students of criminology social work psychology sociology and other disciplines who have an interest in women offenders The Oxford Handbook of Juvenile Crime and Juvenile Justice Barry C. Feld, Donna M.
