It is true that the 'Bible Belt' movement is dominating the headlines as well as itself as a contemporary understanding of the American mind because it easily represents the backward and anti-liberal attitudes in general politics that are ever-growing representations of the neo-fundamentalists and the Bible control in the American and especially southern theocracy. As indicated and as we mentioned that together political movements to give the sense of the nation's stability, groups or only to accept the new political system of the 1990s, especially, upon the religious activities in our foreign countries. The well-associated study comparison of the neo-fundamentalist movement in a sense that the legal tradition and history of America are based on those included in a tradition, as the nation have submitted to religious and political liberalism in the 19th century, it often influences others in support of the liberal's liberalism. Extension of the political liberalism is by contrast representing the change in legal system, without changing its legal, in our movement and making a culture of a self-reliance movement. However,

And, finally, I agree that there is a significant gap between the current state of research and the state of practice in the field of organizational behavior. This gap is the result of a number of factors, including the lack of communication between researchers and practitioners, the lack of funding for research on organizational behavior, and the lack of interest in organizational behavior on the part of the general public. I believe that this gap can be closed by increasing communication between researchers and practitioners, increasing funding for research on organizational behavior, and increasing interest in organizational behavior on the part of the general public.
