They Spread Their Wings Alastair Goodrum, 2013-01-01 What turns an ordinary man into an extraordinary one The answer lies in the stories of six teenage volunteers for Second World War aircrew who exchanged school uniform for Air Force Blue and took a giant step into the unknown Based on original research from flying log books diaries and family archives this collection of true tales describes the men s training for those coveted Wings the nervous excitement of that first sortie over enemy territory and flying into the hell of an enemy flak barrage and fighters From the skies over Europe to jungles and deserts all endured hardship adventure and danger They experienced action under enemy fire wounds burns and crash landings escape and evasion in occupied territory and the privations of life as a POW Seventy years on and these brushes with death are by any measure hair raising encounters that turned adolescents into men some of whom survived the war while others paid the ultimate price

Photography in Africa Richard Vokes,2012 Gives an ethnographic account of the complexities of the use of photography in Africa both historically and in contemporary practice This collection of studies in African photography examines through a series of empirically rich historical and ethnographic cases the variety of ways in which photographs are produced circulated and engaged across a range of social contexts In so doing it elucidates the distinctive characteristics of African photographic practices and cultures vis vis those of other forms of vernacular photography worldwide In addition these studies develop areflexive turn examining the history of academic engagement with these African photographic cultures and reflecting on the distinctive qualities of the ethnographic method as a means for studying such phenomena The volume critically engages current debates in African photography and visual anthropology First it extends our understanding of the variety of ways in which both colonial and post colonial states in Africa have used photography as a means for establishing and projecting their authority Second it moves discussion of African photography away from an exclusive focus on the role of the the studio and looks at the circulations through which the studios products the photographs themselves later pass as artefacts of material culture Last it makes an important contribution to our understanding of the relationship between photography and ethnographic research methods as these have been employed in Africa RICHARD VOKES is Senior Lecturer in Anthropology and Development Studies at the University of Adelaide Australia and author of Ghosts of Kanungu

Pre-State Photographic Archives and the Zionist Movement Rotem Rozental,2023-03-24 By entering and critically re activating the Zionist photographic archive established by the Division of Journalism and Propaganda of the Jewish National Fund this research examines its rippling impact on civil landscapes prior to 1948 in Palestine and its lasting impact on the region to date This study argues that the Zionist movement makes particular use of the machinery of the photographic archive aiming to constitute the boundaries of Palestine as a Jewish state claiming ownership over the land and announcing internationally the success of its enterprise thus substantiating the image it sought to embed as the reality of the land This archive was not stand alone as it was functioning in relation to a vast complicated network of organizational systems and technologies in the Middle East and across the world Crucially this system functioned as a national archive in future tense for a nation state that was not yet in existence seeking to substantiate its regional authority and shape its cultural repository outlining parameters for inclusion and exclusion from its civic space The book will be of interest to scholars working in art history photography history visual culture Jewish studies Israel studies and Middle East studies
