Paper Faces: Babyboomer Memoir
"Greer's poetry brings a unique dimension to the experience of autobiographies, with delicate and vivid shapes and images that the reader's ability to see through her eyes. She has chosen the right details to make places and times come to life. Her treatment is surprising and compelling. It is amazing."
—Susan L. Davis, Ph.D., Director, University of Oregon Women's Center

"I love the poems. The author has a gift for the image in the poem. They come out of the baby boom, traveled a long way, and are now, sometimes hilarious, and often touching poems to put in their hearts. She tells us about it in a series of poems that tell us with a grace of reminiscence and a thorough education for her time and place."
—Annette Chace, M.A., author of Pomegranate Seed and other poems, Director, Rollins University's Graduate Program in Children's Literature.

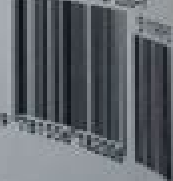

The Author

Elizabeth (Ibby) Greer lives near the Blue Ridge Mountains with her husband and cat. After "WWII" she resigned from most of her civic boards and opened a day, independent, full-service bookstore on their property where had been General John Early's pre-Civil War Law Office. Her first one-woman show of her oils at a local college is in 2011.
