Drawing on the work of academics and other experts from across Canada Carleton University's School of Public Policy and Administration's annual book takes a focused and robust look at an era where a political coronation seemed inevitable but high expectations had to be managed downwards almost immediately A less than buoyant fiscal surplus escalating concerns about liberal ethics and corruption and a growing volatility in public opinion are examined as are Canadians increasingly uncertain views about the new Liberal leadership versus the old Liberal Party's ten year hold on power A new Conservative Party and a suddenly feisty New Democratic Party are also a central part of the new 2004-2005 Canadian political and policy milieu

Misplaced Distrust Éric Montpetit, 2011-11-01 Citizens of industrialized countries largely share a sense that national and international governance is inadequate believing not only that public authorities are incapable of making the right policy decisions but also that the entire network of state and civil society actors responsible for the discussion negotiation and implementation of policy choices is untrustworthy Using agro environmental policy development in France the United States and Canada as case studies ric Montpetit sets out to investigate the validity of this distrust through careful attention to the performance of the relevant policy networks He concludes that distrust in policy networks is for the most part misplaced because high levels of performance by policy networks are more common than many political analysts and citizens expect Opposing the tenets of state retrenchment his study reveals that providing participation in governance to resourceful interest groups and strong government bureaucracies is an essential component of sound environmental policies for agriculture A timely and crucial contribution to the good governance debate this book should be required reading for policy makers and politicians as well as students and scholars of public policy political science environmental studies and government

Newman, 2012-02-01 The Canadian constitutional reforms of 1982 which included a Charter of Rights and Freedoms analogous to the American Bill of Rights brought about a convergence with American constitutional law As in the U S Canadian courts have shown themselves highly protective of individual rights and they have not been shy about assuming a leading and sometimes controversial political role in striking down legislation In clear and easy to understand language the contributors not only chart but also explore the reasons for areas of similarity and difference in the constitutional politics of Canada and the United States

The Courts Ian Greene, 2011-11-01 Academic and policy circles have been abuzz lately over whether unelected and unaccountable judges should play as great a role in policy making as they currently do It was Canada s Supreme Court for example that decided in 2002 to extend voting rights to all prisoners And when Parliament changed the definition of marriage to include gay and lesbian couples in 2005 it was reacting to decisions of provincial appeal courts To understand this debate we need to appreciate the fundamentals of how courts operate The Courts provides a well informed account of the judicial system and its place in democratic life Ian Greene offers an insider s perspective on the role of judges lawyers and expert witnesses the cost of litigation the representativeness of juries legal aid issues and questions of jury reform He also examines judicial activism in the wider context of public participation in courts administration and judicial selection and of how responsive the courts are to the expectations of Canadian citizens The Courts moves its examination of the judicial system beyond the well trodden topics of judicial appointment discipline independence and review to consider the ways in which courts affect daily life in terms of democratic principles Although courts are often viewed as elitist and unaccountable they are more valuable aspect of democratic practice than most citizens realize The Human Paradox

Ralph Heintzman, 2022-08-31 What is a human being What does it mean to be human How can you lead your life in ways that best fulfil your own nature In The Human Paradox Ralph Heintzman explores these vital questions and offers an exciting new vision of the nature of the human The Human Paradox aims to counter or correct several contemporary assumptions about the nature of the human especially the tendency of Western culture since the seventeenth century to identify the human with rationality and the rational mind Using the lens of the virtues The Human Paradox shows how rediscovering the nature of the human can help not just to understand one's own paradoxical nature but to act in ways that are more consistent with its full reality Offering accessible insight from both traditional and contemporary thought The Human Paradox shows how a fuller richer vision of the human can help address urgent contemporary problems including the challenges of cultural and religious diversity human migration and human rights the role of the market artificial intelligence the future of democracy and global climate change This fresh perspective on the Western past will guide readers into what it means to be human and open new possibilities for the future Rethinking Feminist History and Theory Lisa Pasolli, Julia Smith, 2025-01-31 Rethinking

Feminist History and Theory considers the past present and future of feminist history and theory emphasizing how feminism has influenced the histories of gender class and labour and their intersections This vibrant collection inspired by the work of historian and women's studies scholar Joan Sangster features essays from academics across multiple disciplines highlighting the dynamism of feminist historical scholarship in Canada The book explores questions such as the following How has women's resistance and radicalism been expressed lived represented and repressed over the past century How do we research these phenomena How do we situate feminism in relation to other movements for egalitarian social change Contributors explicitly address these recurring themes aiming to chart new directions for future research and teaching While primarily Canadian focused the collection includes global perspectives with contributions from scholars in Chile Finland Sweden and the UK The essays emphasize the importance of cross disciplinary collaboration incorporating insights from labour studies political economy anthropology legal studies and feminist theory Ultimately Rethinking Feminist History and Theory engages deeply with Sangster's rich and wide ranging work to understand and interpret women's experiences It seeks to inspire future scholarship and teaching in feminist history and theory showcasing the ongoing relevance and adaptability of feminist perspectives Rediscovering Reverence Ralph Ripley Heintzman, 2011 A surprising and insightful work Rediscovering

Reverence offers a rational explanation of what the modern western world calls religion and argues that it is not what most people assume. Questioning western culture's evolving use of the word religion over the last five centuries, Ralph Heintzman strips away misunderstandings to demonstrate that faith is not the same as belief. He shows how faith is not something one has but something one does, leading the reader to a deeper understanding of religious practice and its necessary place in human life. Drawing on familiar experiences as well as aspects of western and eastern spiritual traditions, Heintzman argues that religious practice is rooted in two basic ways human beings act in the world. It is therefore an element in the structure of the human spirit, not a phase in its history. Explaining the meaning of religious practice in contemporary language, Rediscovering Reverence is addressed to anyone who wants to explore the meaning and promise of a religious life. A unique and thoughtful meditation on the role of reverence in everyday life, Rediscovering Reverence presents new perspectives on modern faith, religion, and both personal and societal well-being.

Motivating Ministers to Morality Ian Holland, 2017-11-22 This title was first published in 2002. Political ethics is a rapidly growing field in disciplines such as political science, philosophy, applied ethics, and public policy, and it has become a major topic in current affairs reporting on politics. This book discusses the most prominent subjects and occasional victims of the ethics debate: government ministers. It is the first major work to discuss institutional reforms around the world that target ministerial morality and asks how these reforms are influencing the motivation and conduct of the most powerful of our politicians. The book provides unique insights into ministerial behaviour and the changing role of institutions in influencing the ethics of the executive, with analyses from around the world. Contributors to the volume include international high-profile players in political ethics. They include Lord Nolan, the first Chairman of Britain's Joint Parliamentary Committee on Standards in Public Life; Professor Robert J Jackson, a leading Canadian political scientist instrumental in establishing the Canadian Office of the Ethics Counsellor; and Associate Professor Noel Preston, the leading commentator on ethics in Australian politics who has been involved in developing a number of its ethical regimes.

Winning and Keeping Power in Canadian Politics Jason Roy, Christopher Alcantara, 2020-08-07 In this work, the authors employ a series of experiments to assess the strategies used to win elections and stay in power once elected.

Rural Women's Leadership in Atlantic Canada Louise Irene

Carbert,2006-01-01 Most people are aware of the large and persistent gender imbalance in elected office at all levels of government in Canada but few appreciate the far greater imbalance that occurs outside of large cities This deficit arises not from rural voter bias but from low numbers of female candidates running for winnable seats The question of why there are so few female candidates has been difficult to answer largely because we know so little about the pool of potential candidates Rural Women s Leadership in Atlantic Canada presents results from a regional field based study which confronted this challenge directly for the first time Louise Carbert gathered together small groups of rural community leaders 126 women in all throughout the four Atlantic provinces and interviewed them about their experiences and perceptions of leadership public life and running for elected office Their answers paint a vivid picture of politics in rural communities illustrating how it intersects with family life work and the overall local economy Through discussion of their own reasoned aversion to holding elected office and of resistance encountered by those who have put their names forward the interviewees shed much needed light on the pervasive barriers to the election of women Carbert not only contextualizes the results in terms of economic and demographic structures of rural Atlantic Canada but also considers points of comparison and contrast with other parts of the country
