Interviews with Independent Book Publishers in the Pacific Northwest and British Columbia

Jerome Gold

"I don't think there's much to come out of this thing. They need information and inspiration and support from the publishing community from the small independent publishers..." — Barbara Wilson. "I don't know if there was ever a moment when I really said yes, I am going to do this. It was really kind of just everything led to me. But, and then, as you said, I kind of said, well I might not like to do this, it is not that I was giving things up is it?" — Ruth Goss. "Yes, what really drove why?" I mean, what was the impetus of her writing anything...?" — Ann-Louise Greenhouse. "The impetus is always to have enough resources to pay the bills without actually being the books you really want to do." — Scott McHenry. "You have a problem with some critical academics pursuing literature, and making sure there is a critical perspective, and thinking the consequences of those [academic] choices." "I think there are many, many very good writers who are doing some very good work and who are never getting to the publisher." — Jerome Gold. "I don't think...I give a lot more now...I'm not in the business of making books, this is the business of publishing books...when you look at the state of affairs, you're looking at the end of the printing out of the market." — Eric Lader. "The relationship between authors and publishers is not a free-for-all. It's an adversarial relationship. The system has made you feel that there are two sides you can't do. It's not adversarial, just it's adversarial." — Margaret Stewart. "One has to have a good understanding of the adversarial relationship between author and publisher. This is a world that can work very, for the author, better. However, a publisher, I had my own moments in which I would say, publisher with corporate and family, that that's a moment usually." — Robert McEwen. "...one of the reasons [publishers and authors] get out as badly as they are is because..." — Scott McHenry. "It is what was somewhat ironic when I got involved in this, that it was paper after paper, as in the industry, it was kind of acknowledged that you couldn't do it for money, because there wasn't the will to do it. And you can't do it if you don't want to work hard because the work was hard. And you wouldn't do it if you wanted stability, because it was a really kind of thing to do. When you look at the kind of people who are doing in this work, they're generally very committed and energetic." — John Schum.
