Early American Nature Writers Daniel Patterson, 2007-11-30 At a time when the environment is of growing concern to students and general readers nature writing is especially meaningful This book profiles the literary careers of 52 early American nature writers such as John James Audubon Ralph Waldo Emerson Caroline Stansbury Kirkland Thomas Jefferson Henry David Thoreau and Mabel Osgood Wright Each entry is written by an expert contributor and discusses the writer's life and works Entries close with primary and secondary bibliographies and the encyclopedia ends with suggestions for further reading Global warming pollution and other issues have made the environment a topic of constant discussion these days Many environmental concerns were treated by early American nature writers who recognized the beauty of the natural world in an age of commercial expansion Some of the most famous writers of the 18th and 19th centuries wrote about nature and their works are stylistic masterpieces At a time when students are being encouraged to read and write about nonfiction these masterworks of early American nature writing are all the more important This book gives students and general readers a welcome introduction to early American nature writers

Women Writing Nature Barbara Cook, 2007-12-14 Since Silent Spring was published in 1962 the number of texts about the natural world written by women has grown exponentially The essays in Women Writing Nature A Feminist View argue that women writing in the 20th century are utilizing the historical connection of women and the natural world in diverse ways For centuries women have been associated with nature but many feminists have sought to distance themselves from the natural world because of dominant cultural representations which reflect women as controlled by powerful natural forces and confined to domestic spaces However in the spirit of Rachel Carson some writers have begun to invoke nature for feminist purposes or have used nature as an agent of resistance This collection considers women's writings about the natural world in light of recent and current feminist and ecofeminist theory and finds a variety of approaches and perspectives both by the scholars and by the authors discussed culminating with the voices of two women activist and scientist Joan Maloof and Irish poet Rosemarie Rowley who both write about the natural world from a feminist perspective

Coming of Age at the End of Nature Julie Dunlap, Susan A. Cohen, 2016-09-19 Coming of Age at the End of Nature explores a new kind of environmental writing This powerful anthology gathers the passionate voices of young writers who have grown up in an environmentally damaged and compromised world Each contributor has come of age since Bill McKibben foretold the doom of humanity's ancient relationship with a pristine earth in his prescient 1988 warning of climate change The End of Nature What happens to individuals and societies when their most fundamental cultural historical and ecological bonds weaken or snap In Coming of Age at the End of Nature insightful millennials express their anger and love dreams and fears and sources of resilience for
