Burt,2020-07-12 What do we mean by art As a category of objects the concept belongs to a Western cultural tradition originally European and now increasingly global but how useful is it for understanding other traditions To understand art as a universal human value we need to look at how the concept was constructed in order to reconstruct it through an understanding of the wider world Western art values have a pervasive influence upon non Western cultures and upon Western attitudes to them This innovative yet accessible new text explores the ways theories of art developed as Western knowledge of the world expanded through exploration and trade conquest colonisation and research into other cultures present and past It considers the issues arising from the historical relationships which brought diverse artistic traditions together under the influence of Western art values looking at how art has been used by colonisers and colonised in the causes of collecting and commerce cultural hegemony and autonomous identities World Art questions conventional Western assumptions of art from an anthropological perspective which allows comparison between cultures It treats art as a property of artefacts rather than a category of objects reclaiming the idea of world art from the art world This book is essential reading for all students on anthropology of art courses as well as students of museum studies and art history based on a wide range of case studies and supported by learning features such as annotated further reading and chapter opening summaries

There Is No Such Thing As a Spirit in the Stone! Misrepresentations of Zimbabwean Stone Sculpture Olga Sicilia,2010-08 This work focuses on contemporary Zimbabwean Stone Sculpture widely known until the early 1990s as Shona Sculpture from the perspective of a critical anthropological analysis of cultural identity and representation The analysis frames the inception of this art movement within the colonial socio historical circumstances of its genesis where discourse about the producers of this art form Shona discourse was created Drawing from the social context of inequality and racial spatial segregation and from the concepts of the primitive in art and anthropology the author aims to show how Shona discourse entails a primitivist construction of the Other i e the sculptors cultural identity that is directly linked to modernist primitivism Shona discourse as a temporalising discourse situates the producers of so called Shona sculpture in an extra ordinary time the time of primitive myth magic and cosmology constituting in this sense a good example of allochronic discourse Originating within the colonial politics and ideology of the 1960s and contested by younger generations of sculptors from the 1990s onwards this discourse was paradoxically appropriated by the cultural politics of indigenisation during the early period of the post independence Zimbabwean State as part of its national identity and heritage

Contested Cultural Heritage Helaine Silverman,2010-11-02 Cultural heritage is material tangible and intangible that signifies a culture s history or legacy It has become a venue for contestation ranging in scale from protesting to violently claimed and destroyed But who defines what is to be preserved and what is to be erased As cultural heritage becomes increasingly significant across the world the number of issues for critical analysis and hopefully mediation arise The issue stems from various groups religious ethnic national political and others come together to claim appropriate use exclude or erase markers and manifestations of their own and others cultural heritage as a means for asserting defending or denying critical claims to power land and legitimacy Can cultural heritage be well managed and promoted while at the same time kept within parameters so as to diminish contestation The cases herein range from Greece Spain Egypt the UK Syria Zimbabwe Italy the Balkans Benin and Central America Zimbabwean Stone Sculpture Marion I.
