MEMS and Microstructures in Aerospace Applications Robert Osiander, M. Ann Garrison Darrin, John L. Champion, 2018-10-03 The promise of MEMS for aerospace applications has been germinating for years and current advances bring the field to the very cusp of fruition Reliability is chief among the challenges limiting the deployment of MEMS technologies in space as the requirement of zero failure during the mission is quite stringent for this burgeoning field MEMS and Microstructures in Aerospace Applications provides all the necessary tools to overcome these obstacles and take MEMS from the lab bench to beyond the exosphere. The book begins with an overview of MEMS development and provides several demonstrations of past and current examples of MEMS in space. From this platform the discussion builds to fabrication technologies, the effect of space environmental factors on MEMS devices, and micro technologies for space systems instrumentation, communications, thermal control, guidance, navigation, and control, and propulsion. Subsequent chapters explore factors common to all of the described systems, such as MEMS packaging, handling, and contamination control, material selection for specific applications, reliability practices for design and application, and assurance practices. Edited and contributed by an outstanding team of leading experts from industry, academia, and national laboratories, MEMS and Microstructures in Aerospace Applications illuminates the path toward qualifying and integrating MEMS devices and instruments into future space missions and developing innovative satellite systems.

Georeferencing Linda L. Hill, 2009. An introduction to the principles of unified georeferencing which uses placename and geospatial referencing interchangeably across all types of information storage and retrieval systems. Georeferencing, relating information to geographic location, has been incorporated into today's information systems in various ways. We use online services to map our route from one place to another; science, business, and government increasingly use geographic information systems (GIS) to hold and analyze data. Most georeferenced information searches using today's information systems are done by text query. But text searches for placenames fall short when, for example, a place is known by several names or by none. In addition, text searches don't cover all sources of geographic data; maps are traditionally accessed only through special indexes, filing systems, and agency contacts; data from remote sensing images or aerial photography is indexed by geospatial location, mathematical coordinates such as longitude and latitude. In this book, Linda Hill describes the advantages of integrating placename-based and geospatial referencing, introducing an approach to unified georeferencing that uses placename and geospatial referencing interchangeably across all types of information storage and retrieval systems. After a brief overview of relevant material from cognitive psychology on how humans perceive and respond to geographic space, Hill introduces the reader to basic information about geospatial information objects, concepts of geospatial referencing, the role of gazetteer data, the ways in which geospatial referencing has been included in metadata structures, and methods for the implementation of geographic information retrieval (GIR). Georeferencing will be a valuable reference for librarians, archivists, scientific data managers, information managers, designers of online services, and any information professional who deals with place-based information.
