The Paradox of Trauma and Growth in Pastoral and Spiritual Care Mary Beth Werdel, 2023-10-24 The Paradox of Trauma and Growth in Pastoral and Spiritual Care Night Blooming introduces and bridges the gap between the psychological and spiritual perspectives and responses in trauma work illuminating the complexity of the human phenomenon of growth through suffering that is too easily misunderstood in the context of pastoral and spiritual care Through the hopeful metaphor of night bloomers rare plants that grow because of light but bloom in the darkness it is suggested that while psychological trauma is inherently negative and suffering creates a spiritual inner night moving through it may reveal a new complex reality of the human experience not previously understood We may see ourselves others or the world in a way that is stronger wiser deeper or more brilliant than we had known before The book presents the goal of pastoral and spiritual work is not to extinguish darkness Nor is it to solely focus on the light The work is to learn how to stay awake through the night without glorifying it Such a task is far easier when we believe there might be a rare and uniquely beautiful bloom to stay awake for and that witnessing such a bloom could have great consequences for living a meaningful life

Trauma, Psychosis, and Posttraumatic Stress Disorder Kate V. Hardy, Kim T. Mueser, 2017-12-21 There is abundant evidence showing a strong association between trauma exposure psychotic symptoms and posttraumatic stress disorder PTSD Early trauma exposure contributes to the formation of psychotic symptoms and the development of psychotic disorders or severe mental illnesses such as schizophrenia bipolar disorder and treatment refractory major depression Furthermore among persons with psychotic disorders multiple traumatization over the lifetime is common due to factors such as social stigma the criminalization of severe mental illness and increased vulnerability to interpersonal victimization In addition to these factors is the traumatic nature of experiencing psychotic symptoms and coercive treatments such as involuntary hospitalization and being placed in seclusion or restraints

Not surprisingly these high rates of trauma lead to high rates of PTSD in people with psychotic disorders which are associated with more severe symptoms worse functioning and greater use of acute care services In addition to the impact of trauma on the development of psychotic disorders and comorbid PTSD traumatic experiences such as childhood sexual and physical abuse can shape the nature of prominent psychotic symptoms such as the content of auditory hallucinations and delusional beliefs Additionally traumatic experiences have been implicated in the role of stress responsivity and increased risk for transition to psychosis in those identified as being at clinical high risk of developing psychosis Finally although the diagnostic criteria for PTSD primarily emphasize the effects of trauma on anxiety avoidance physiological over arousal and negative thoughts it is well established that PTSD is frequently accompanied by psychotic symptoms such as hallucinations and delusions that cannot be attributed to another DSM V Axis I disorder such as psychotic depression or schizophrenia Understanding the contribution of traumatic experiences to the etiology of psychosis and other symptoms can inform the provision of cognitive behavioral therapy for psychosis including the development of a shared formulation of the events leading up to the onset of the disorder as well as other trauma informed treatments that address distressing and disabling symptoms associated with trauma and psychosis Until recently the trauma treatment needs of this population have been neglected despite the high rates of trauma and PTSD in persons with psychotic disorders and in spite of substantial gains made in the treatment of PTSD in the general population Fortunately progress in recent years has provided encouraging evidence that PTSD can be effectively treated in people with psychotic disorders using interventions adapted from PTSD treatments developed for the general population In contrast to clinician fears about the untoward effects of trauma focused treatments on persons with a psychotic disorder research indicates that post traumatic disorders can be safely treated and that participants frequently experience symptom relief and improved functioning There is a need to develop a better understanding of the interface between trauma psychosis and post traumatic disorder This Frontiers Research Topic is devoted to research addressing this interface

The COVID-19 Pandemic, Problematic Internet Use, Post-traumatic Stress and Mental Health Guohua Zhang, Anise M.S. Wu, Xue Yang, Miguel Ramos, Xin Wang, 2023-10-20. The COVID 19 pandemic has caused tremendous loss of human life and disruption of normal daily activities across the globe. The COVID 19 pandemic can be traumatic and have short term and long term influences on individual behaviors and well being. To contain and control the spread of COVID 19 various public health and social measures e.g. social distancing, quarantine, isolation and extensive lockdown of cities have been implemented in countries worldwide. With such social and environmental changes the prolonged feelings of fear, worry, stress and the lack of social activities and interaction may greatly increase the prevalence of mental health issues e.g. anxiety and depression. Nowadays Internet has permeated into everyone's life which may play an increasingly important role in coping with COVID 19 related stress and anxiety. However the increasing reliance on the Internet may lead to problematic Internet use (PIU), prolonged screen time and sedentary lifestyles and pose great risks to public health. P. Wong, Lilian C. J. Wong, 2007-02-15. Has the developing world developed modern concepts of stress? Are coping methods the same around the globe? Such questions are not simple to answer and until recently few knew to ask them. In recent years Western psychologists have recognized that their prevailing views of psychology do not always translate worldwide and that no culture has a monopoly on either stress or coping. The Handbook of Multicultural Perspectives on Stress and Coping was created to address this realization. This unique volume moves beyond simple comparisons of behaviors in other countries by clarifying critical concepts in stress and coping, analyzing and synthesizing vast amounts of global data and identifying constructs and methodologies necessary for meaningful cross cultural research. An international multiethnic panel of forty-five contributors presents elegant studies of stress, survival and resilience as cultures evolve and countries interact, including personal transformation as a coping strategy, psychological skills that enhance intercultural adjustment, individual versus collectivist values in coping, Buddhist and Taoist traditions in coping, the cumulative effects of historical environmental and political stressors on nations in the Middle East, specific cross cultural perspectives from Latino American families to Canadian aboriginal peoples to minority university students. The editors have assembled a vital store of knowledge raising crucial implications for clinicians working with immigrant international populations and evaluating the current state of theory, research and assessment. The Handbook documents major steps toward scientific advancement and human
