Education in the School of Dreams Jennifer Lynn Peterson, 2013-05-22 In the earliest years of cinema travelogues were a staple of variety film programs in commercial motion picture theaters These short films also known as scenics depicted tourist destinations and exotic landscapes otherwise inaccessible to most viewers Scenics were so popular that they were briefly touted as the future of film But despite their pervasiveness during the early twentieth century travelogues have been overlooked by film historians and critics In Education in the School of Dreams Jennifer Lynn Peterson recovers this lost archive Through innovative readings of travelogues and other nonfiction films exhibited in the United States between 1907 and 1915 she offers fresh insights into the aesthetic and commercial history of early cinema and provides a new perspective on the intersection of American culture imperialism and modernity in the nickelodeon era Peterson describes the travelogue's characteristic form and style and demonstrates how imperialist ideologies were realized and reshaped through the moving image She argues that although educational films were intended to legitimate filmgoing for middle class audiences travelogues were not simply vehicles for elite ideology As a form of instructive entertainment these technological moving landscapes were both formulaic and also wondrous and dreamlike Considering issues of spectatorship and affect Peterson argues that scenics produced and disrupted viewers complacency about their own place in the world

New Jersey's Environments Neil M. Maher, 2006-01-19 Americans often think of New Jersey as an environmental nightmare As seen from its infamous turnpike which is how many travelers experience the Garden State it is difficult not to be troubled by the wealth of industrial plants belching smokestacks and hills upon hills of landfills Yet those living and working in New Jersey often experience a very different environment Despite its dense population and urban growth two thirds of the state remains covered in farmland and forest and New Jersey has a larger percentage of land dedicated to state parks and forestland than the average for all states It is this ecological paradox that makes New Jersey important for understanding the relationship between Americans and their natural world In New Jersey's Environments historians policy makers and earth scientists use a case study approach to uncover the causes and consequences of decisions regarding land use resources and conservation Nine essays consider topics ranging from solid waste and wildlife management to the effects of sprawl on natural disaster preparedness The state is astonishingly diverse and faces more than the usual competing interests from environmentalists citizens and businesses This book documents the innovations and compromises created on behalf of and in response to growing environmental concerns in New Jersey all of which set examples on the local level for nationwide and worldwide efforts that share the goal of protecting the natural world

Making Mountains David Stradling, 2009-11-23 For over two hundred years the Catskill Mountains have been repeatedly and dramatically transformed by New York City In Making Mountains David Stradling shows the transformation of the Catskills landscape as a collaborative process one in which local and urban hands capital and ideas have come together to reshape the mountains and the communities therein This collaboration has had environmental economic and cultural consequences Early on the Catskills were an important source of natural resources Later when New York City needed to expand its water supply engineers helped direct the city toward the Catskills claiming that the mountains offered the purest and most cost effective waters By the 1960s New York had created the great reservoir and aqueduct system in the mountains that now supplies the city with 90 percent of its water The Catskills also served as a critical space in which the nation's ideas about nature evolved Stradling describes the great influence writers and artists had upon urban residents especially the painters of the Hudson River School whose ideal landscapes created expectations about how rural America should appear By the mid 1800s urban residents had turned the Catskills into an important vacation ground and by the late 1800s the Catskills had become one of the premiere resort regions in the nation In the mid twentieth century the older Catskill resort region was in steep decline but the Jewish Borscht Belt in the southern Catskills was thriving The automobile revitalized mountain tourism and residence and increased the threat of suburbanization of the historic landscape Throughout each of these significant incarnations urban and rural residents worked in a rough collaboration though not without conflict to reshape the mountains and American ideas about rural landscapes and nature
