Who Wrote the Book of Life? Lily E. Kay, 2000 This is a detailed history of one of the most important and dramatic episodes in modern science recounted from the novel vantage point of the dawn of the information age and its impact on representations of nature heredity and society Drawing on archives published sources and interviews the author situates work on the genetic code 1953 70 within the history of life science the rise of communication technosciences cybernetics information theory and computers the intersection of molecular biology with cryptanalysis and linguistics and the social history of postwar Europe and the United States Kay draws out the historical specificity in the process by which the central biological problem of DNA based protein synthesis came to be metaphorically represented as an information code and a writing technology and consequently as a book of life This molecular writing and reading is part of the cultural production of the Nuclear Age its power amplified by the centuries old theistic resonance of the book of life metaphor Yet as the author points out these are just metaphors analogies not ontologies Necessary and productive as they have been they have their epistemological limitations Deploying analyses of language cryptology and information theory the author persuasively argues that technically speaking the genetic code is not a code DNA is not a language and the genome is not an information system objections voiced by experts as early as the 1950s Thus her historical reconstruction and analyses also serve as a critique of the new genomic biopower Genomic textuality has become a fact of life a metaphor literalized she claims as human genome projects promise new levels of control over life through the meta level of information control of the word the DNA sequences and its editing and rewriting But the author shows how the humbling limits of these scriptural metaphors also pose a challenge to the textual and material mastery of the genomic book of life

Sciences of the Flesh Dianne F. Sadoff,1998 Deploying Latour s model of scientific theory production this book argues that the historical emergence of psychoanalysis depended on nineteenth century scientific practices laboratory experimentation medical transmission of research findings along collegial or social networks and medical representation of illness including case studies amphitheatrical demonstration of cases hospital records of symptoms and laboratory graphology and photography of patients Freud used autobiography summary and outline to stabilize his concepts and control the dissemination of his new science Psychoanalysis had successfully created new scientific plausible bridges between psyche and soma nature and the social to produce a modern theory of hybrid subjectivity that was rooted in yet conceptually separated from the body
