Percepts, Concepts and Categories B. Burns,1992-10-09 The most important distinction derived from the computational view of thought is between structures and processes So proclaimed Farah and Kosslyn in 1982 arguing that structures and processes cannot be examined in isolation and concluding that converging operations are required to isolate the structure process pair that can explain a particular finding The distinction between structure and process within the study of percepts concepts and categories is considered in depth in this volume with penetrating commentaries by fellow authors concluding each chapter This interesting format achieves a broad coverage of the various aspects and implications of the structure process distinction It affords a salient indication of the diversity of positions as to the description and utility of distinguishing structures and processors At the same time it reveals that researchers specializing in areas of study ranging from simple structure and process involved in perceptual organization and texture to complex structure and process associated with reading graphs and chess expertise do utilize such a distinction in similar ways The analysis is organized into four major parts within the book Early Visual Representation and Processing Percepts Concepts Categories and Development Categories Concepts and Learning and Higher Order Representation and Processing Modest Nonconceptualism Eva Schmidt,2015-07-06 The author defends nonconceptualism the claim that perceptual experience is nonconceptual and has nonconceptual content Continuing the heated and complex debate surrounding this topic over the past two decades she offers a sustained defense of a novel version of the view Modest Nonconceptualism and provides a systematic overview of some of the central controversies in the debate An explication of the notion of nonconceptual content and a distinction between nonconceptualist views of different strengths starts off the volume then the author goes on to defend participants in the debate over nonconceptual content against the allegation that their failure to distinguish between a state view and a content view of non conceptualism leads to fatal problems for their views Next she makes a case for nonconceptualism by refining some of the central arguments for the view such as the arguments from fineness of grain from contradictory contents from animal and infant perception and from concept acquisition Then two central objections against nonconceptualism are rebutted in a novel way the epistemological objection and the objection from objectivity Modest Nonconceptualism allows for perceptual experiences to involve some conceptual elements It emphasizes the relevance of concept employment for an understanding of conceptual and nonconceptual mental states and identifies the nonconceptual content of experience with scenario content It insists on the possibility of genuine content bearing perceptual experience without concept possession and is thus in line with the Autonomy Thesis Finally it includes an account of perceptual justification that relies on the external contents of experience and belief yet is compatible with epistemological internalism
