Oakes, 2017-10-24 Bad Foods demonstrates how a variety of historical or political events and personalities have shaped our current views of good nutrition On several occasions in American history concerns have arisen over the safety of our food supply e g harmful ingredients in processed foods and the potential that processing might deplete foods of their nutrients These concerns help explain how food characteristics such as freshness natural organic and unprocessed have become important to Americans Bad Foods traces how the food nutrients fat salt and sugar have acquired negative reputations for health as well as any controversies and outright misconceptions of the dangers of these nutrients Bad Foods also explores confusion that can in part be attributed to biased media coverage about foods Modern Americans are routinely bombarded with information about the health value of certain foods and the dangers of others Frequently health information about certain nutrients receives exaggerated coverage e g dietary fat while the importance of other nutrients gets ignored e g vitamins and minerals Moreover health information about foods is often perceived as contradictory While some readers may be startled by what they perceive to be a challenge to sacred beliefs about foods others will see the honesty in both the research and the writing and recognize the social benefits of examining our beliefs about foods Bad Foods will be of interest to sociologists food science specialists and social historians

Translating China as Cross-Identity Performance James St. André,2018-05-31 James St Andr applies the perspective of cross identity performance to the translation of a wide variety of Chinese texts into English and French from the eighteenth to the twentieth centuries Drawing on scholarship in cultural studies queer studies and anthropology the author argues that many cross identity performance techniques including blackface passing drag mimicry and masquerade provide insights into the history of translation practice He makes a strong case for situating translation in its historical social and cultural milieu reading translated texts alongside a wide variety of other materials that helped shape the image of John Chinaman A reading of the life and works of George Psalmanazar whose cross identity performance as a native of Formosa enlivened early eighteenth century salons opens the volume and provides a bridge between the book's theoretical framework and its examination of Chinese European interactions The core of the book consists of a chronological series of cases each of which illustrates the use of a different type of cross identity performance to better understand translation practice St Andr provides close readings of early pseudotranslations including Marana's Turkish Spy 1691 and Goldsmith's Citizen of the World 1762 as well as adaptations of Hatchett's The Chinese Orphan 1741 and Voltaire's Orphelin de la Chine 1756 Later chapters explore Davis's translation of Sorrows of Han 1829 and genuine translations of nonfictional material mainly by employees of the East India Company The focus then shifts to oral aural aspects of early translation practice in the nineteenth century using the concept of mimicry to examine interactions between Pidgin English and translation in the popular press Finally the work of two early modern Chinese translators Gu Hongming and Lin Yutang is examined as masquerade Offering an original and innovative study of genres of writing that are traditionally examined in isolation St Andr's work provides a fascinating examination of the way three cultures interacted through the shifting encounters of fiction translation and nonfiction and in the process helped establish and shape the way Chinese were represented The book represents a major contribution to translation studies Chinese cultural studies postcolonial studies and gender criticism
