Political Confidence and Democracy in Europe Christian Schnaudt, 2018-07-09 This book examines the antecedents and consequences of citizens confidence in different political institutions and authorities Its main argument states that a distinction between confidence in representative and regulative institutions and authorities is of crucial importance in order to gain novel insights into the relevance of political confidence for the viability of democratic systems Relying on individual level data from the European Social Survey ESS the author provides empirical evidence that citizens from a total of twenty one European countries make a distinction between confidence in representative institutions and authorities and confidence in regulative institutions and authorities Furthermore the author shows that both types of political confidence emanate from different sources and are associated with varying consequences Overall these findings indicate that confidence in representative and confidence in regulative institutions and authorities establish two qualitatively different types of political confidence each with distinct implications for the functioning and well being of modern democracies

Perfect Equality Maria H. Morales, 1996 This original and compelling book argues that previous studies of John Stuart Mill's work have neglected his egalitarianism and thus seriously misunderstood his views Morales demonstrates that Mill was fundamentally concerned with how the exercise of unjust or arbitrary power by some individuals over others sabotages the possibility of human well being and social improvement Mill therefore believed that perfect equality more than liberty was the foundation of democracy and that democracy was a moral ideal for the organization of human life in all of its dimensions By reinterpreting Mill Morales also challenges twentieth century views of liberalism and addresses its contemporary communitarian and feminist critics

Do Voters Look to the Future? Brad Lockerbie, 2008-06-30 Do voters look to the past the future or both when deciding how to vote In Do Voters Look to the Future Brad Lockerbie shows voters to be more sophisticated than much of the work in political science would suggest He argues that voters do not simply reward or punish the incumbent administration but instead make a comparative evaluation of the likely performance of each candidate and vote for the one that will most likely provide them with a prosperous future Making use of data from 1956 through the present Lockerbie finds that voters take into account both what has happened and what they think will happen when they vote He finds these economic evaluations to be strongly related to voting behavior both for the House and the Senate as well as the presidency Additionally Lockerbie examines the role of these economic items to explain changes in party identification
